HECKER SAVED FROM HANGING BY EXECUTIVE

claims Russell Hecker planned the killing of Frank Bowker.

"During the evening of the day which the tragedy occurred, Russell Hecker was frequently seen by his associates in a normal condition. He borrowed a gun from a friend, took it to the Imperial hotel, left it with a bell boy and went back in a short time to the bell boy, who returned it to Russell Hecker, who put the revolver in his pocket, leaving a perfect trail, easily followed of his handling of the fatal weapon that caused him the trouble. Had he deliberately planned the murder, he surely would not have been so careless in his movements. He borrowed a car late in the evening that he did not intend to use in which he had a few days before placed a hop sack. I cannot find any act of Russell Hecker prior to the tragedy that leads me to believed that he premeditated the murder.

"Frank Bowker was shot in the back of the head; that fact, together with the acts of Russell Hecker after the tragedy have been by far the hardest for me to reconcile with my belief that the murder was not premeditated. I have, however, come to the conclusion that the ball in the back of the head of Frank Bowker was merely an accident of a scuffle that evidently took place in the car at the fatal moment the shot was fired. The conduct of Russell Hecker after he discovered that Frank Bowker was dying can only be accounted for by the fact that he must have been a panic stricken boy. I believe he lost his power to reason and think when he discovered that he had committed the act of murder. He took the body of Frank Bowker nearly one hundred miles from the scene of the tragedy, after putting it in a hop sack with rocks he dropped it in the Calapooia river. All these acts and the removing of the money and articles from the body of Frank Bowker does not tend to prove premeditation, but to my mind are proof positive that the defendant was crazed with fear, and like any one who commits crime or wrong, was attempting to hide his tracks, not having aroused himself from the stupor in whic he must have been living during these dreadful hours. He did not for several hours bring himself to a realization that the one safe course was complete confession of all the facts. Leaving the money with his friends is proof to me that he did not shoot Frank Bowker for personal gain. His return to the scene of the tragedy in the early hours following the fatal Easter Sunday evening, also the return to his own apartment, his surrender to the authorities fully confirms my belief that the murder was not premeditated.

"I do not believe the fatal shot was fired by Russell Hecker in self defense. If I so believed, I would then be my duty to pardon him. Russell Hecker and Frank Bowker were engaged in an unlawful liquor transaction, a quarrel ensued and the leaden bullet from the gun held by Russell Hecker killed Frank Bowker, for which crime it is my judgment Russell Hecker should be confined in the Oregon state penitentiary for his natural life."

Two Silverton Business Houses Change Hands

SILVERTON, Ore., May 19. — (Special to The Statesman.) — Two Silverton business houses have changed hands within the past few days. M. McCullough has sold his confectionery and grocery in North Silverton to W. G. Howard of Portland and Mr. Howard has taken possession. Mr. McCullough will take a trip east before he again enters business.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Blair, who for the past 18 months have owned the Silverton Delicatessen, have sold it to Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Dickerson who were recently married. Mr. Dickerson owns the Silverton news stand, and, it is understood, that he will combine both stocks. The location of the news stand is to be used by Miss Byrel Smith, it is understood, for her beauty shop, which at present she is conducting in connection with the Smith Gift Shop, owned by her parents.
