Miss Field is a graduate of Wilkes College, where she had an especially active part in school affairs. Arriving in the states early in the year, Miss Field has been taking special work at Columbia University in New York. She will be at the home of her mother and sister, Mrs. Elizabeth E. Field and Mrs. Inez F. Fleming, 150 North 21st street, during the summer, returning to India in the late autumn.

as teacher. Mrs. E. J. Swafford presented the awards. The commencement address was delivered by Mrs. John L. Brady, "dead of women at Vassar." There were 14 members in the graduating class of the day, each appearing in the dignity of cap and gown. Those receiving awards of merit, in the form of bouquets of spring flowers, were Mrs. Reeves, Mrs. Findley, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Alden, Mrs. Shanks, Mrs. Utter, Mrs. Brethaupt, Mrs. Blatchford, Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Bryan, Mrs. Hurd, Mrs. Halvorson, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Durkheimer and Mrs. Waterman.

At the end of the afternoon the hostess circle served a two-course luncheon. Roses and pink sweet peas centered the table.
Mrs. Charles Newton will arrive today from Oakland, California, to be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. B. Blatchford. Mrs. Newton who has been spending the winter in California is on her way to her home in North Dakota. Tomorrow the Blatchfords, together with their guest, will motor up the highway and on Saturday will go to Seaside.

Mrs. C. P. Bishop will leave this morning for Walla Walla and Pendleton on her way to the Cleveland convention, stopping for the night in Walla Walla, and joining the delegation later in Pendleton.

Miss Lorlei Blatchford is a guest for the week in Eugene.

Miss Helen Pearce chose the delightful informality of the afternoon tea, in entertaining this week for the three local sororities, Beta Chi, Delta Phi, and Alpha Phi Alpha. On Tuesday afternoon the Beta Chi girls were guests for a chat and tea, while yesterday the Delta Phi members enjoyed calling hours with Miss Pearce. This afternoon the Alpha Phi Alpha maids will be similarly complimented.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. George J. Pearce poured, assisted by Miss Frances Richards and Miss Helen Pearce. The tea-table was centered with a bowl of pink sweet peas. Attractive candles were used. The conversation of the afternoon was delightfully reminiscent of Miss Pearce's summer abroad. Mrs. C. L. Sherman was an additional guest yesterday for the tea.

Prof. E. W. Hobson presented Miss Kathleen La Raut, lyric soprano, last night in her graduation recital in voice. A well arranged program was beautifully rendered. Miss Jean Hobson, Miss La Raut's accompanist, was assistant artist for the evening.

Mrs. Carle Abrams, 1465 Chemeketa street, will be hostess this afternoon for the members of the Golden Hour club.

The Daughters of Veterans are asked to meet at the armory this morning at 9:30 o'clock to assist in the flag-placing on the old soldiers' graves. All available cars will be welcomed. This afternoon the women will meet again, at 2 o'clock, to help with the button-hole bouquets.

The American Legion auxiliary will conduct a cooked food sale today at 347 State street.

Miss Caroline Hrubetz, who is a member of the faculty of the Salem high school, will represent the Oregon branch of the National Education association convention in Washington, D. C., June 29-July 5. She will be accompanied east by her sister, Miss Frances Hrubetz, also a teacher in the local high school. Both young women plan to take summer work at Columbia University in New York City.

An especially congenial crowd, much larger than the average, met Tuesday afternoon for the Eastern Star "Object party," planned and elaborated by an ingenious hostess-committee of six. Forty interesting, miscellaneous articles were distributed about the rooms, each representing the concrete answer to an appropriate question printed on a paper slip. Mrs. W. P. Powie won the prize. Roses and other Maytime flowers centered the long tea table. The day's hostesses included Mrs. John R. Sites, Mrs. Paul Hauer, Mrs. O. Headrick, Mrs. Wayne Henry, and Mrs. George King. Plans for the next meeting, June 10, are in charge of a committee headed by Mrs. Claire Vibbert.

No man would be conceived if his stomach could express its honest opinion of his wisdom.

CHAPTER 177

HAS MADGE MADE THE CORRECT GUESS LILLIAN'S BRUSQUE WORDS DESERVE?

I promptly took the cue Lillian had given me, although I had to make an effort to bring myself back from the remembrance of the terrible time through which the youth standing before me had proved so staunch an aid.

"No, I shan't ask Mr. Chester to stay for luncheon," I said gaily, stressing the verb. "I simply shall tell Katie to put another plate on, and dare him not to stay. He knows, or should know, that there is no one in the world more welcome to our home than he."

I spoke but the truth, though I realized, even as I spoke, that my enthusiasm must have sounded fulsome, exaggerated. But the young chap had rendered us such signal service in our time of awful need that every one of the family held not only gratitude but genuine regard for him.

Mr. Chester flushed from both embarrassment and pleasure if his expressive face told the truth, and he said hurriedly: "I hope you know that there is no home to which I like better to come," and there was boyish earnestness in his tone.

Lillian clapped her hands, and I was sure I detected a note of impatience in the sound.

"A very pretty speech," she said. "But I must listen to another kind. Madge, if you'll just tell Katie about that extra plate, and then come back here, I'll be much obliged. There are some points I want to go over with you."

I hurried away with a tiny feeling of chagrin. That Lillian had dismissed me a bit cavalierly I realized, and I knew also that if we had been alone I should have cared no whit. But there was something in the honest, boyish admiration and sympathy which Tom Chester had given me during our search for Junior which had appealed to me—and my vanity could not help a tiny bit of resentment at being belittled in his eyes.

Like a Sentinel.
The unworthy little feeling was almost instantly banished by another, a wondering curiosity as to Lillian's selection of Tom Chester as her medium of communication with the government operatives due in a few hours. At the time of Junior's kidnapping, Lillian had been desperately ill, and we had kept all knowledge of the awful thing from her until after she had recovered. She had had no personal acquaintance with Tom Chester.

Indeed, as I looked back, I was sure she had never seen him before this hour, for we had kept her in almost absolute seclusion until her trip to the Catskills. And while I had often spoken of his kindness and likable young personality, yet it had been Hugh Grantland to whom we all had given credit for the wonderful way in which he had tracked the criminals and had restored our boy to us.

Hugh Grantland, of course! The name as like a key to the little puzzle. He must be in communication with both Lillian and Tom Chester, must have recommended the lad to Lillian. I stopped short on my way to the kitchen with almost an eerie little feeling at my heart.

Never do I receive any communication from Hugh Grantland save the conventional picture postcard with his traveling address on the message space, and the single initial "H," which he mails me whenever he leaves his permanent address for any time longer than a day or two. But from time to time, in odd bits of revelation, there comes to me the knowledge that he is like a sentinel at the crossways of my life, that there is no detail of my existence of which he is not cognizant, and that he stands ready with royal aid and protection when ever I shall need it.

Madge is Comforted.

Of course, I knew that this present association of Lillian and Tom Chester, through Grantland's recommendation, had nothing to do with me or my needs. But as well as if I had heard the words from Hugh Grantland's own lips, did I know that the army officer had kept in touch with the younger man in order to have a strong resourceful arm at my service in his absence.

I defy any woman in the world to remain unmoved by such a tribute, no matter how much she may be in love with her husband. And when the knowledge of it comes to her at a time when the man who has sworn her love and homage has gone away for a little season—patently chafing at domesticity—into the vicinity of a girl whom she detests—perhaps I may not be so rigidly censored when I confess that for a little while the knowledge that Hugh Grantland's thoughtfulness and care comforted the sorreness which Dicky's thoughtlessness had left in my heart.

Donald Parents Appreciate Teacher's Six Years' Work

Appreciation of the services of Miss Margaret Scollard of Woodburn, who has been teaching at Donald for the last five and a half years, was shown Tuesday night when 12 pupils were presented diplomas from the eighth grade by Mrs. Mary L. Fulkerson, county school superintendent. The P-T association of Donald presented Miss Scollard with many floral tributes in addition to a fine necklace, while the graduating pupils presented her with a silver vase.

Miss Scollard has made an enviable record during her term of teaching at Donald, according to Mrs. Fulkerson. Pupils of all six classes which have graduated under her made no failures. A feature of the exercises were the attendance of all members of the first class to be graduated under Miss Scollard and who are all graduating from Woodburn high school this year.

Next year Miss Scollard will teach at Sublimity and will be succeeded by Mrs. Gertrude Kirkpatrick of Salem. Miss Leitha Cone, primary teacher at Donald, will be back in her position next year. She also was the recipient of marks of appreciation for her work.
