

ROYAL ANNS WILL HAVE 5 CENT BIDS

This Offer to Be Made in Salem Next Week, According to Tip Last Night

The cherry market in Salem has not yet opened up. But a tip was given a Statesman reporter last evening that there will be offers of 5 cents a pound for Royal Ann cherries next week.

An authority on the fruit markets told the reporter last night that, though the market has not yet opened, and the Salem canners are so far making no offers at all, he is not worrying—that no doubt the market will open up in a few days.

Another Salem man who keeps track of the markets said last night that, though there are not many sales in California at the price fixed by the association down there, six and a half cents for Royal Anns, that he expects to see a market for cherries soon.

There was a rumor last night also that Mr. Raas, who has been buying Royal Anns in Salem for several years, for the Lyons-California, Glace Fruit company, is expected here daily; that he told a Salem man in California recently that he was coming.

Last year when Mr. Raas completed his operations here, shipping balled cherries to California for the maraschino trade, he stored his boxes in the second story of the Statesman warehouse, on the alley on Ferry street, opposite the Southern Pacific warehouse, where he carried on his operations.

Mr. Raas said then that he would be back in Salem and use his boxes this year.

Gooseberries, Strawberries

Gooseberries are coming in large volume to all the canneries of this district. Strawberries are also coming in fast. The lack of rain is worrying most of the strawberry growers. The crop would be much larger in most yards, if we could have copious rains right now. One grower from the Sublimity neighborhood, who expects to market 1000 crates of Oregon strawberries in Salem, said last night that he would have more than 1000 crates, with some rain; if it would come quickly.

Some Gooseberries Over There are some gooseberries over the tonnage contracted for by the canneries of Salem. They are not being bought, the cannery managers claiming that they do not wish to run the risk of packing beyond their advance sales. The Falls City cannery is proposing to take these and can them for 50 cents a case plus cost; the idea being that the growers will likely net 6 to 7 cents a pound when the canned product is disposed of. The Falls City cannery can take 30 to 40 tons to handle in this way, in addition to the berries that were bought outright in advance.

The Oregon Packing company has been running double shifts on gooseberries, to get their tonnage out of the way for strawberries. Fine Strawberries Some fine strawberries are coming in; but there is a critical situation for those growers who did not contract. There are no takers. About 350 of the growers who were members of the Oregon Growers Cooperative association find themselves up against a hard proposition in disposing of their berries as individuals. No doubt some strawberries will go to waste. The picking will not last long, unless we get some rain, and soon.

Six Apply for Training Camp Trip Next Month

Six young Salem men have made application with Sargeant C. R. Lucy to attend the citizens' military training camp to be held at Camp Lewis from June 19 to July 18. These are Floyd L. King, 462 Hoyt; Howard C. Page, route 1; Charles A. Dean, 1230 Lewis; Wendell W. Gilbert, 945 North Summer; John D. Brown, 1306 North Church, and Wilfred O. Walberg, 395 South Twenty-second.

"The state of Oregon has fallen down badly in getting its quota of applications," Sargeant Lucy said yesterday. "The quota for Oregon is 370 and to date there have been but 191 applications filed. We are short 179 at present. Last year there were only four states in the union that did not produce their quota and Oregon was one of these. It appears now that Oregon will be one of them again this year."

Washington has a quota of 630 and at present 888 have made application to attend the camp, 258 applications over the quota.

HOMECOMING EVENT BIG

MOUNT ANGEL COLLEGE, St. Benedict, Or., May 28.—A crowd of more than 2000 alumni and friends of the institution attended the first annual homecoming celebration of Mount Angel college here Sunday. Ideal weather favored the program of events, which was run off smoothly under the direction of student committees of the College of Men's club.

At the annual meeting of the Alumni association, Martin J. Deragisch of the East Side Mill & Lumber company of Portland was unanimously re-elected president of the Alumni association. Rev. F. P. Leipzig of Corvallis was elected first vice-president; Herbert Michaelbrook, principal of St. Paul high school, second vice president, and Thurston E. Daniels of Medford, third vice president. Rev. Alcin Heibel, O. S. B., rector of Mount Angel college, was re-elected to the position of secretary and treasurer, and Carl Herbring won the election for sergeant-at-arms.

SPEED-NERVE AND LOVE HERE

"Sporting Youth" at the Grand Theatre

Speed, nerve, and love. Those three are the predominant qualities of "Sporting Youth," starring Reginald Denny and Laura La Plante, which opens its week-end run at the Grand theatre with a matinee Friday afternoon.

There is a punch and a thrill to every foot of the stirring film, which tells a story so vital and so interesting as to hold the audience breathless throughout its showing. It's a story of the dare-devil kings of the "roaring road."

A mere private chauffeur in the eyes of the world, Jimmie Wood, had escaped but an hour before the starter's pistol sent them flying over the way to fame—or death, all because of his love for a charming girl. His enemies had kidnapped him on the previous evening and held him a prisoner on an island, but love found a way. In the grandstand stood the girl who was his incentive. She knew that he was not the celebrated "Splinters" Wood, the English racer; but love plays queer pranks with the hearts of women—and men, too. Should he win this great international contest he would secure her love for ever, she had determined, despite their difference in social standing.

The runner-up to the daring chauffeur was driving for the man she was spurning. He was a dangerous contender, and was edging up to the lead—with one more lap to go.

Suddenly, to the surprise of the spectators, a powerful vehicle was crowded from the track. Over the cliff it went. Then in a flash, another car was side-swiped and wrecked. With the goal in sight, a third machine swerved, climbed the embankment, and was hurled into the grandstand.

Jimmy still clung to his wheel, tearing down to the tape. To his dismay, he beheld his employer enter the grandstand. He knew the "boss" would never have consented to the racing of his car. Involuntarily he slowed up. The car behind him suddenly spurted—and the greatest climax in the history of sporting youth and its daredevil exponents was then written.

Jackie Coogan at The Oregon Theatre

Jackie Coogan as a little Belgian boy with baggy trousers, funny little cap, great, clumsy, clattering wooden shoes and a patched jacket with large buttons of assorted shapes and sizes—Jackie Coogan as little Nello, the immortal hero of Ouida's story, came to the Oregon theater last night, and when he disappeared he had the hearts of the audience with him.

Another triumph was scored by this mysteriously gifted child in a story as different from "Long Live the King" as the latter is different from "Oliver Twist."

Jackie's medium is this, his second Metro picture, is "A Boy of Flanders," adapted from Ouida's story. "A Dog of Flanders," and the adaptation has been made with the greatest skill. The story is reproduced on the screen with a fidelity rarely to be observed and not a single episode of significance, drama, comedy, pathos or thrill is missing. While the climax, in the snow storm that sweeps over Flanders fields and buries the cathedral steps at Antwerp in a deep cover, is one of the most poignant and appealing that has ever been screened.

Never has Jackie appeared more effectively, and it is safe to say that in "A Boy of Flanders" he touches tragic heights never before revealed in any Jackie Coogan picture, while his art is capable, and abundantly provided throughout the entire story. His audience last night moved through strata of smiles and tears, laughter and thrills, merriment and suspense.
