Wisconsin Cited
Wisconsin in a few small counties annually produces $160,000,000 worth of dairy products and has 2900 cheese factories. Mr. Dodson said. This industry belongs to western Oregon, where conditions are unexcelled for the raising of blooded livestock, which requires green feed for a majority of the year. Feeds are cheaper by 25 per cent here than they are in Wisconsin, he said. Livestock is developed in the valley that is equal to the best raised in England and Spain.

DODSON FOR PUSHING FLAX

Portland Chamber of Commerce Talks on "Oregon Specialties"

Flax is a perfect adjunct to dairying, and if Oregon as a state had appreciated the value of this industry further progress would have been made today, according to W. D. B. Dodson, manager of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, who spoke, on "Oregon Specialties" at the Salem Chamber of Commerce luncheon Monday. Mr. Dodson told the business men how he had become interested in the industry and development of flax back in 1896 through an interview with Mrs. W. P. Lord, whose husband was governor of the state at that time.

Thought Is Needed
"Flax belongs to the dairy industry and the thinking minds of the state should stand behind the farmers who understand the growing of flax," he said. "There is no need to worry about a manufacturing plant, for if the product can be grown profitably the question of a factory is only incidental. Salem is entitled to the first factory. I believe that the time is close when such a factory will be erected in the Willamette valley. Costs of getting the raw material ready for the factory have been a hindrance in the past, but this is being overcome by the general use of machinery. Where it formerly cost $20 a acre to pull the flax by hand this can be accomplished at a cost of about $5 an acre by machinery."

Other specialties that should be developed, after the valley has been studied by experts for years, and that are adaptable to the soil and climate were said by the speaker to be dairying and the canning industry.

$500,000,000 is possible with the right kind of management and development. Sub-tropical soils are not necessary, and what problems were solved in California by the citrus, raisin and olive men can be solved here.

Annual Market Necessary
"Things that find a market every year and that belong to the Willamette valley should be the crops that are pushed," Mr. Dodson said in closing. "Study Oregon specialties and determine the products that will stand for long shipments and the Willamette valley will come into its own."

R. J. Hendricks presided as chairman of the day.

"The summer girl is becoming more and more visible," says a writer. I had noticed that.

CHESTER ABRAMS DIES SUDDENLY

Brother of Salem Man Succumbs Following Operation in New York

Word was received last night of the sudden death of Chester W. Abrams in the hospital at Glens Falls, N. Y., following a sudden illness and operation yesterday afternoon for intestinal trouble. Chester Abrams was born and raised at Lincoln, Polk county, just north of Salem. He lived in Salem for a number of years and was a former employe of The Statesman Publishing company. At the outbreak of the war he was a member of the Seattle fire department and enlisted in the air service, serving for more than a year overseas. He was returned to America disabled and spent many months in a New York hospital following an operation from which he never entirely recovered. He later engaged in the auto accessory business in Buffalo, and for the past year has traveled for the La France Fire Engine company, Elmira, N. Y. It was while on a trip for his company that the sudden and fatal illness overtook him.

He was a son of Mrs. T. E. Abrams, 1465 Chemeketa street, Salem, and a brother of Miss Letitia and Col. Carl Abrams, and was unmarried.

The body will be brought to Salem for burial.

If there is a moral, it is that legislators who become investigators cease to be one and are failures at the other.
