

THE FINEST HOP YARDS IN WORLD

T. A. Livesley & Co. Have the Best Equipped Hop Plants Ever Known

The Irrigation Slogan number of The Statesman on May 22 contained a description of the new irrigation system being put in by T. A. Livesley & Co. for their Lake Brook farm, seven miles below Salem. The two pumps will supply a million and a half gallons of water in ten hours. The system is about ready now. They will irrigate their whole 390-acre hop yard there on their 640-acre Lake Brook farm.

Fine Equipment

There is an apartment house on this farm with 63 rooms and another one just finished with 38 rooms. The buildings are electric lighted, have running water in each room, with stoves, chairs, etc., and the camp ground is electrically lighted. There is a hall for entertainment, and a large store, and 12 hop kilns, and four more hop kilns are being built, to take care of the larger yield due to irrigation. There is nothing just like this hop yard elsewhere in the world; no other yard as thoroughly equipped.

Have Other Yards

T. A. Livesley & Co. have also a big hop yard four miles south of Salem, on the Riverside paved highway. They have 290 acres in hops here, and they use patent steam dryers; steam heat, drying their hops in seven hours, against 18 to 24 hours under the old system. They have just built three apartment houses at this yard, and they may install an irrigation system here later; though they would have to build a pipe line a mile and a half long to the water supply, the Willamette river. They have also a 50-acre hop yard at Oreville, on the Oregon Electric line, 12 miles south of Salem, and one of 106 acres six and a half miles southeast of Independence.

T. A. Livesley & Co. grow in their own yards about a million pounds of hops a year, and they are in addition large contractors and dealers in hops. T. A. Livesley and John J. Roberts, both among Salem's leading men in all matters of business and of general public interest, are the members of the firm.

A Lot of People

They employ a lot of people in their operations. In picking time, they will have about 2500 people on their payrolls. As they produce about a tenth of the hops of Oregon, this means that in picking time an army of about 25,000 people are employed. That means a big sum of money that has general distribution here in the days of August and September — to say nothing of large sums during the rest of the year, spent for the labor of cultivating, training, etc.

If the reader will note other articles in this morning's issue, he will find that this one firm produces about one-thirtieth of all the hops grown in the world.

AT THE CANNERIES EVERYBODY BUSY

Settled Down to a Long Season's Run; Rain Did No Damage to Cherries

Canneries in the Salem district have settled down to steady production for the season and are busy on strawberries, cherries, raspberries and loganberries. Baker, Kelly & McLaughlin, at the old Salem Fruit Union plant, in their barreling operations, are still very busy on strawberries, and will be until some time next week.

The cannery of the Hunt Bros. company is busy on all four varieties of fruit, but is not in the market for cherries, it was said yesterday. Strawberry packing is practically completed at the Producers Canning & Packing company plant and attention is being turned toward the other varieties.

The Star Fruit Products company is also busy on several varieties of fruit.

Loganberries Fine

Loganberries are fine for the first picking, it was said at several of the plants. Cherries, as was expected, are a little small this year, but so far are not showing any ill effects from the rain. However, a portion of the cherries being packed at present are being received from the hill sections near Salem, where there was comparatively little rain.

No Damage Done Yet

Packers in general evince no uneasiness over the rain, and it is believed the moisture will not do any damage through cracking the fruit. This condition will hold true providing there is no sudden reverse in temperature and a return to hot weather.

Little was said at the canneries regarding raspberries, other than the fruit was being handled. It is in good shape, but not exceptional. With the added moisture the remainder of the raspberry and loganberry crop is expected to receive material benefit.

The Raas interests, in the Southern Pacific warehouse back of The Statesman office, are busy early and late receiving all the Royal Ann cherries they can handle.
