

Agate Beach One of Most Popular Resorts on Coast

NEWPORT, Or., June 19.—As a result of the selection of Yaquina Head as the site for the site of the recently formed Newport-Agate Beach Golf club, popular interest in the possibilities of Agate Beach as a seaside playground has been greatly quickened. Lovers of the outdoors whose wanderings carry them from their favorite Newport haunts are discovering in this nearby region of wide, agate-strewn beaches and rugged headlands, cool parkland and flower dotted meadow, rocky ravines and grassy knolls, an enchanting retreat from the cares of home and office.

hills, there to enjoy the magnificence of the marine view. Many ideal spots beckon to picnickers, the management of the resort has provided excellent camping facilities for the convenience of those who wish to spend a week or more out of doors, and, for those who wish more conventional accommodations, the beautiful and picturesque Agate Beach Inn affords faultless hotel service amid an atmosphere of polished rusticity. This unusual hospitality has been catering to the wants of an appreciative patronage for several years and is justly famous for its excellent service and superior cuisine.

Ascending Sunset Crest, the highest and westernmost hill of the chain which forms the backbone of Yaquina Head, the visitor is greeted with a marvelous view, embracing 50 square miles of land and sea. Standing on this crest in the glow of a perfect summer afternoon one is impressed as never before with the grandeur of nature's handiwork. Each moment brings with it a startling realization of some new beauty. North and south, as far as the eye can see, the lazy tides creep in on the broad white beaches, and in the distance the roots of Newport, nestling among the gray pine-clad bluffs, glisten like silver in the brilliant afternoon sunshine. Ahead, the smooth Pacific stretches until the darker blue of her limitless expanse merges imperceptibly with the pale blue of the horizon. Directly beneath the eye rises the beacon of old Yaquina, and to the right and left, in the protected coves formed by the rugged outline of the Head, or the marine gardens, in whose shallow depths may be seen a thousand varieties of sea life native to the Pacific shores. Away to the east the rolling foothills and rugged peaks of the coast range, the nearer slopes splendid in their clothing of fir and spruce and pine and the farther ranges looming blue and gray in the hazy

A 50-acre tract of the Agate Beach territory situated on the rolling meadow and hill land just east of the United States Light-house reservation on Yaquina Head has been leased to the Newport-Agate Beach Golf association, and a large crew of men, working under the direction of Reginald Sanford, golf expert, is rapidly putting the ground in shape for play. An effort is being made to have at least part of the course ready for the Fourth of July opening, which will be accompanied by a big celebration. When completed the course, which is conceded by golf men to be the most slightly and attractive on the Pacific coast, is expected to draw players from all over the country.

The remainder of the Agate Beach territory has been divided into attractive home sites according to a plan which will insure the enhancement of the natural beauty of the place. Many beautiful parks will be developed, a system of good streets will be maintained, and henceforth the building of homes will be regulated in such a way as to insure the construction of only those of a high degree of attractiveness. Nothing in the way of concessions which will detract from the air of quiet beauty, which constitutes the chief charm of Agate Beach, will be tolerated.
