MAJOR MARTIN, HIS AID ON WORLD FLIGHT, AND MAP SHOWING WILDERNESS THEY CROSSED AFTER MOUNTAIN CRASH

Ten days after hopping off at Chignik, Alaska, for Unalaska, a distance of 530 miles, Major Frederick Martin and Staff Sergeant Alva L. Harvey, his mechanic, arrived safe at Port Moller, Alaska, after terrific hardships in making an overland trail in four-foot snow. Port Moller is 139 miles from their starting point. Their plane crashed into a mountain in a fog and was completely wrecked, but neither flyer was injured. The other three planes of the globe-girdling squadron, which left Chignik with Major Martin's flagship, made that leg in safety and had proceeded before news of Martin and Harvey had been received.

LEGION IDEAL IS OUTLINED

State Commander Griffith Is Speaker at Lions Club Luncheon

Americanization is the general platform of the American legion for the future according to George P. Griffith, of Salem, new state commander of the ex-service men's organization, who spoke at the Friday luncheon of the Lions club. Activities in the past and plans for the future were outlined by the speaker.

"As a result of wartime injuries there are at present 50,000 men in government hospitals, and while the majority of extreme cases are disappearing, mental, tubercular and nervous cases are demanding constant attention," Commander Griffith said. "The legion will keep up with problems that rise from year to year."

Orphans Need Care
Included in the program for the future are the care for 6000 war orphans at present and for the thousands that will need care in the future. Fathers of these orphaned children are being sought and they receive attention, the speaker said. These will not be placed in institutions, but will receive care and attention in private homes or in their own groups. Surveys are being made in penal institutions, and while the American legion does not ask for sympathy for law breakers, many of the offenders need treatment for mental disorders.

"Immigration is another big problem confronting the American legion," Commander Griffith said. "The organization believes the consul abroad should have the right to pass upon the desirability of those who seek to enter this country. There are 8,000,000 aliens in the United States at present who do not desire to become citizens. The American legion seeks registration for these that careful watch may be kept upon them."

Unfit to be Helped
"One result of the war was that many young men were found to be physically unfit," the speaker said in closing. "The American legion is doing what it can to correct this by interesting young boys in athletic activities. Legionnaires are becoming scout leaders and legion posts are sponsoring Boy Scout troops. The American legion does not believe in a war of aggression but of one for defense. It stands for a reasonable degree of efficiency in the army, navy and air service. Had this preparedness policy been adopted prior to 1918 the lives of thousands of young men would have been saved during the period that the United States was engaged in the world struggle."

MINOR AILMENTS SEIZE ATHLETES

Olympic Team Possessed of Epidemic of Sore Muscles, Boils, Etc.

ON BOARD STEAMSHIP AMERICA, June 20.—(By wireless to the AP.)—An epidemic of minor ailments has put 22 of the American Olympic athletes on the ship's hospital list. Dr. Graeme Hammond, head of the Olympic medical unit, is busy treating lame arms, boils, strained tendons and seasickness, but none of the cases is serious, and it is expected all will be well when the America reaches port.

Charley Paddock injured a toenail, developing a slight infection. It is healing quickly, however, and is not interfering with his workouts. Loren Murchison, who has been suffering from an attack of tonsillitis, is continuing to show improvement. It now is expected he will start in both the 100 meters and 200 meters sprints.

Dr. Hammond found that Jack Kelly, who won the sculling championship in the 1920 games, has developed a weak heart. The sculler was advised by Dr. Hammond not to enter competition again after the Olympic games.

SALEM MAY BE AIR STATION

Commercial Flying Company Considers Making Headquarters Here

That Salem may become the headquarters of the French-Noll-Shanahan Aviation company, operating three commercial airplanes, was indicated yesterday by A. R. French, head of the company, who is spending the week end here. Two of the airplanes have been flying over the city the last day or two, landing on a level field near the prison backyard. Today and Sunday the airplanes will land at the fairgrounds.

"While the company owns three airplanes, two are always flown together," French said yesterday. "We are engaged in regular passenger business, spending week-ends in various cities in Oregon, particularly along the Willamette river. If sufficient trade is available, we may locate our headquarters here rather than in Portland, owing to the more favorable and central location."

OLD ELI DEFEATS HARVARD OARSMEN

Fifty-Seventh Regatta Is Won By Yale Crew—Margin Is Four Lengths

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Rowing a cautious, heady race, Yale's great crew led Harvard home by four lengths over the four-mile course on the Thames river today in the major event of the 57th regatta between the two ancient rivals. Carefully husbanding its strength over the early mile, the blue gradually increased an advantage obtained in the first half mile and was able to romp down the final quarter mile to the New London railroad bridge at a stroke of 37, weary but with plenty of strength in reserve.

The varsity victory gained for Yale a clean sheet in the regatta, blue crews having won the freshman and junior varsity events earlier in the day and the combination crew race yesterday. It also closed Yale's second consecutive season without a reverse on the water.
