

BETTER CONSTRUCTION of CHURCH and SCHOOL BUILDINGS IS NEEDED

Hollow Tile Will Give Fireproof and Rodent and Vermin Proof Qualities, Besides a Number of Other Advantages, Will Provide Buildings That Will Last Forever, and That Will Be Cheaper Over a Period of Years Than Those Constructed of Less Permanent Materials.

Views of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Salem, Oregon; designed and constructed by the Rev. H. D. Chambers, rector. Mr. Chambers was assisted by C. L. Goodrich, an architect of Portland. Constructed of burned clay, hollow tile, and finished with magnesite stucco.

It is generally known that the American public does not pay sufficient heed to that homely but wisely quoted axiom, "Don't look the door after the horse has been stolen," yet it is inevitably the case that radical changes needed to decrease the dangers to life and limb are never made until a great catastrophe takes place. Being in the midst of a huge building program, which includes many churches and schools, there is no better time than the present to lock the door and forestall the stealing of the horse lest the interpretation of this crude statement may mean the loss of those you love.

Fireproof Buildings Best
The building of fireproof churches and schools does not only mean the use of materials which will withstand high temperatures, but also which will not allow high temperatures to develop. In this respect, hollow building tile is paramount, and its rapid growth and universal use is caused directly by its fireproofing qualities, although the ability to weather a conflagration is merely one of its outstanding characteristics.

Necessity is the mother of invention and is the direct cause of hollow building tile. This material was originally designed to protect steel beams in large buildings because the weight and lack of fire resisting properties of other so-called permanent materials made them objectionable. So successfully did hollow tile play its part as a light fire-proofing material that it came to be used as a general construction material in all forms of construction and is now universally used in partitions, floors, walls and foundations in all varieties of buildings.

Making It Plain
To more easily visualize the fireproofing qualities of hollow tile, one need only to consider the fact that this material is subjected to a temperature of 2000 degrees in the making, which is much higher than any temperature ever developed in an ordinary conflagration. Let us consider other qualities of this material which make it so ideal in the construction of schools and churches. Although this material is light in weight, it will carry heavy loads, being designed to carry a minimum of 700 pounds per square inch gross area when laid on the side, and 1200 pounds per square inch gross area when laid on end. The material is light in weight because of the voids, running lengthwise through the tile, the number of these voids being dependent on the size of the tile. These voids not only serve to lighten the blocks but play an even more important role as insulators. An ideally constructed church or school must have walls which will successfully withstand the passage of heat, and partitions which will deaden the sound of voices and music in order that there may be no inter-room interference. This perfect insulation is obtained when the tiles are laid up in a wall, as the voids cause two or more dead layers of air to separate the interior from the exterior. Dead air is the best known form of insulation and maintains an even temperature in the room, making it warmer in winter and cooler in summer, besides deadening all sound penetration. A Versatile Material Hollow tile is a versatile ma-

EDITORIALS OF THE PEOPLE

For Cleaner Lives

Editor Statesman: I read your criticism on Mrs. Springer's "plea for cleaner papers" and want to make a few remarks that I have wanted to say since some of our merchants petitioned that "religious meetings, crippled people, etc., be kept off the streets." Seems to me there should be no ban on a "religious meeting," if it is in a theater, on a street or anywhere else. There is no place so sinful but what Jesus can go to save a precious soul. I have wondered if a few dollars that they possibly might have lost (?) were worth more to them than their future citizens, and I have wondered if they would help to stop cigarette smoking on the streets, to close the Sunday picture shows, and Sunday baseball playing.

Now in regard to the criticisms, I think in many ways "times are better," but I don't think that churches that allow "athletics and dancing," and I will add card playing, should be held up among things that point to "better times." Do we hear shoutings, "Hallelujah! Praise the Lord!" in those churches? No. Such churches keep times from getting better. I would suggest that we watch the progress of such churches. "Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the rewards of the wicked." I believe there are good people in all churches. But there will not be a church where all are good until Christ comes to claim His own. I like "The Statesman." It comes to our home regularly. It is as clean as any secular paper I know of, and I wish every family in Marion county were a subscriber. Then the editor would not have to depend on ads for its upkeep. The editor alone can't make a good paper. People must help. I pray the time may come when there will be enough good ads, subscriptions and substantial articles, but so it can publish an evening paper. I pray the time may come when all papers will be able to put articles of value, the greatest crimes and wickedness and pictures of robbers and murderers in prominent places, and I pray that some power may be put at the head of the "moving pictures" that will not only pass pictures with "good morals," but clean, educational, uplifting pictures that will produce good thoughts and ideas that our next generation may be better and nobler. For there is nothing that makes an impression more lasting than pictures. Something must be done. Why do we hear in all organizations, "What can we do?"

How can we reach the young people? And then cry out, "Our Father in heaven, show us the way to save them." How can we stop our boys and girls from smoking, girls from smoking, and yes, the older ones. I cannot write that name, but oh! I do wonder if the next generation will keep "Mother's Day" with the love and reverence that we now do. Oh, women! I plead with you, stop and think. Make homes for our boys and girls and help to save them from the smoke and drug habit. Let us mothers keep clean examples before them. I heard our state treasurer, in a little country church not long ago, say, "If parents would do more praying and praying before their children, there would not be so many going wrong." I wish such men would talk to people through our papers. Also ask our editor and all good people to do all possible to save our boys and girls.

What Does Salem Need Most?
Editor Statesman:
"To see ourselves as others see us."
Would from many an error and foolish notion free us."
I am one of the "others" who has come to "see."
I have heard that all the nation's trees, and most shrubs of the state of Oregon were growing and correctly named on the Capitol grounds. I fail to see names on but very few and these inconspicuous and in some cases incorrect.
When I see something I want advertised by a firm on such a street, I have sometimes walked several blocks before I could ascertain that I was already on the desired thoroughfare. And while we are on this subject of naming, let us name the score of more of great institutions that Salem is justly proud of, so that not only "he who runs may read" but he who motors by may also read and be heard to say: "I am glad to know what that building is, and now that I have learned, I am all the more anxious to see the inside of it."

Thousands of folks who come to Salem during blossom days, commencement days, or state fair days, don't always have a guide and many prefer to be a little independent, but as for finding anything in the nature of a map of the city, giving the location of the streets and points of compass, I failed to find it at either the chamber of commerce or the tourists' auto camp.

Let's SEE what can be done along these lines.

RADIO

By F. S. BARTON

Kansas Senator, Arthur Capper, has these good words to say of radio: "Radio does not come properly under the classification of a luxury. Radio is the newest means of communication discovered by science. It possesses almost unlimited possibilities of development as an agency of introduction and education. Thus far it has been employed chiefly as a medium of entertainment but every day progress is being made in its development for other purposes." The White House feline for whom the s. o. s. call went out over the air, would add her purr of assent to this and to the chorus that comes from balloonists, arctic explorers, miners and men from the distant, lonely places of the earth. We who take our daily radio as a matter of course, know little of the miraculous meaning it has for such as these.

RADIOCASTING—the new word is not the satisfying word that broadcasting is. Yet they speak with authority and say we must learn to use the more precise term, radiocasting.

It is possible nowadays to fold your loop and like and Arab, silently steal away. Sometimes the man-without-a-set wishes you would!

Radio is the strongest extraneous force tending to unite the nations of the world. On the Pacific coast, the super-heterodyne is now giving a somewhat better account of itself than it has done in the past. The best new sets are doing practically all that is claimed for them by the manufacturers. For some time it seemed that they were making a good record in the east but on this coast, their performance was not so good.

The programs given by the old time duffers of Forest Grove, are among the most appreciated of the radio programs in this section. This is made evident by the telephone calls that come in to KGW and this was also the experience of the Salem broadcasting station, KFCD.

Poor "static!" Of course he's irritating all right, but it's amazing the number of things for which he is blamed—for weak batteries, loose connections, poor ground and inexperienced tuning. Everybody takes a whack at him and in turn he does some razzing himself occasionally.

Receiving conditions are a great deal better than they were a year ago at this time. There are better broadcast stations, better receiving sets and better programs. Beware of cheap radio materials, batteries and tubes. The best is none too good and the cheap junk sometimes offered will bring you all sorts of grief. Look out for bootleg tubes which are always offered "for less." Genuine tubes never consume more than their prescribed current and the printing on the base is black and clear without bluishness. Test-tube tubes have the printing blurred or parts of letters left off. Deal with a reliable radio house and if you can trust the man in charge, take his advice as it is the result of years of experience.

The use of a "C" battery connected with its negative to the grid of the amplifying tubes will prolong the life of the "B" battery and help prevent distortion.

FOSTER NAMED P. M.

William Foster has recently received a notification of the official confirmation of his appointment as postmaster of Tillamook for the next four years. This is his second term in the position, and in the last six years postal receipts have increased over 20 per cent. At present the amount received from money orders is between $15,000 and $20,000 per month. The actual postal receipts for last year were about $18,000. The establishment of the new morning mail service makes city delivery more feasible than it was in the past.—Tillamook Herald.

Uncle Sam's folks spent 350 million dollars on radio sets and fixtures in 1923. There now are 2,500,000 receiving sets in use in the United States having more than eight million listeners. Which may account for the large number of radio jokes that get in print.
