Visitor and Former Resident
Unite in Singing Praises
of the Beautiful Capital City.

Dear Sir:—

As I used to live in Salem and still take the Statesman I thought I would write for the "Trade in Salem" page.

I love the atmosphere of Salem and come back every time I can. Especially do I love the parks. No where else do I find such a collection of trees as in Willson park. Any time of year there are many wonderful trees to fill me with admiration.

Do hope you Salemites make the most of courtesy week as it is a great opportunity to show your spirit. A man stopped at our house the other day and said Salem wasn't what it used to be. He had been living in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where things go with a whirl. But he was mistaken. Salem is the same substantial city it always was. We must admit that a capital city is different from any other city on this green earth. Personally I like it. I like the atmosphere. It is different of course but it is invigorating and inspiring.

I certainly wish Salem and its wide-awake business-men all the success in the world. Tell them for me and others of my kind who have left, that our hearts are still in dear old Salem and there they will remain.

Sincerely,

—ANNA DAVID.
Albany, Oregon.

A man from Iola Kansas, was here this week. He is still here in fact. He is going to locate here. He came as a tourist but is going to remain as a citizen. The appeal of the possibilities has proved too much for this man. He is coming to Salem to live.

Salem has just passed through a rest period. While the stores were closed just one day business took a vacation. The Statesman has only two letters this week and in consequence both are prize winners. The first letter was written by Charles May of Iola, Kansas, who visited here the past week. He left this in the shape of an interview but asked that we put it where it would boost Salem the most.

Editor Statesman:—

I live in Kansas. A mighty good state. I am on a vacation. I went to California and the dry weather discouraged me. I came on to Oregon and my spirits jumped up at once. I stopped at Salem to visit some relatives. I have been here a week and am in love with the city. I am going home determined to come back to Salem to live.

Salem has the most wide-awake set of business men I have ever known. They are always on the job for the city. It is an aspiration that will win. I have caught the fever and believe I could come out here and be contented every day in the year. You have so much here to make a city.

—CHARLES MAY.

Iola, Kansas.
