LETTERS from Franklin B. Launer written "a la bord le Paquebot, France," give the following interesting excerpts: "A wonderful trip. The sea has been very calm until tonight when a wind sprang up—rather rough—several people sick.

"The state-rooms are very comfortable only rather crowded for four men, three trunks, and a lot of hand baggage. Mr. Butterfield from Pullman, Washington; Mr. Meads from Ohio, and a Mr. Beggs (painter) from Yale are the gentlemen in my state-room.

"I certainly am hearing a lot of French, but grow desistant about displaying my limited knowledge. I did try it this morning on the steward and he answered me in English.

"We have our meals served in about eight or ten courses, one thing at a time. They don't serve butter in the evenings.

"Really, everything on the ship is wonderful. The food is splendid, excellently cooked. Fontainebleau students have practically all first class privileges.

"My berth is a top one, next the port-hole. I get plenty of fresh air, and my steamer-blanket came in handy last night.

"Mr. Butterfield, who is in my state-room, is a fine man. Graduated from Harvard in 1905. He has been to Fontainebleau before.

"We have an orchestra on board and several pianos.

"The water already is insufferable.

"Had a lovely visit with Lucille Ross. Went to see my very first music teacher. She lives in Chicago, now—Mrs. Berkman. She is the woman who, Professor Launer writes in a letter received by Byron Arnold, shook her fist in my face and said, 'Franklin, you must give up school-teaching; music is the thing for you.' She got me a class in Canby. It was she who sent me to Mrs. Petri.

"I'm way out at sea. Foggy last night, and the fog horn was sounded continually.

"My greetings to all, and write."

"Still another letter to Miss Beulah Launer speaks further of the delightful days on board: 'Yesterday (Sunday, June 22) was the dullest day of all. I guess I am too used to being able to go over to my studio on Sundays.

"Tomorrow we travel all afternoon on the train. And for the night we'll be in Paris."

"Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Launer received a cablegram later announcing the actual arrival of Professor Launer in Europe.

The following statistics on lynching for the first six months of the year 1924 have been compiled by the department of records and research of Takegee institute:

Total number lynched, 5. Offenses charged: Rape, 3; attempted rape, 1; killing officer of the law, 1. Record by states: Florida 2, Georgia 2, South Carolina 1. Comparison of records: First six months of 1924, 5; first six months of 1923, 15; first six months of 1922, 30; first six months of 1921, 36.
