CONTRACT IS LET FOR FIRE TRUCK

City to Add Latest Type Equipment to Department; Cost $16,250

The bid of the Seagrave company on the new aerial ladder fire truck was accepted last night by the city council. The price set on the equipment is $16,250. The bond issue voted at the May 16 election was for $16,000, but a $283 premium realized on the bond sale made possible the purchase of the truck at the figure named. Four other bids were received, but at least two did not conform to specification and the others ranged up to $17,500. The new truck has an 85-foot ladder extension and a 6-cylinder motor. The length of the equipment when folded on the truck is 62 feet, 3 inches. It is fully equipped with crowbars, sledge hammers, life net, searchlight etc. The new equipment will place the fire department in shape to cope with a fire in the largest of the buildings in the city.

During the course of the meeting Dr. E. E. Fisher, representing the property owners on Market street, asked the change of the pavement specified for the street from cement to black surface. The reason given was that the street had a firm Macadam base to support the black pavement, and a considerable saving could be made. The owners were instructed to present a new petition requesting the change in specifications.

WARNINGS GIVEN ON CANADA TOURS

Complete Identification Is Necessary Due to Strict Immigration Laws

Warning has been issued by R. P. Bonham, immigration inspector, to all persons contemplating trips into Canada that the immigration laws of the United States have been made so severe that complete identification should be obtained before leaving the country. This information was contained in an answer from Mr. Bonham to the inquiry of U. G. Boyer, county clerk, who has been flooded with requests for the laws governing the entrance of Americans into Canada.

In his reply to Boyer on this subject Bonham says: "The Canadian immigration law has undergone no recent material change. Our immigration law, however, effective July 1, is quite drastic and because so many people find difficulty in entering the United States, there are a number of Canadians and others who allege falsely American citizenship or residence. For these reasons the scrutiny of even Americans reentering into the United States is stricter than it has ever been and it therefore behooves Americans going into Canada to be able to identify themselves. This may be accomplished in many ways—by having birth certificates, by affidavits, possibly by tax receipts, documents showing lodge affiliations here, or those motoring having their own car or driver's license. If the parties going are naturalized, they should take their naturalization papers with them and if they are foreigners, they should be prepared to show their long residence here, or the manner and place of their recent entry."

"The Stranger" Very Unusual Picture

To the critics and ordinary theatergoers who have been clamoring for something different in the way of motion picture story material and plot development the Oregon theater is offering "The Stranger," one of the most unusual and remarkable pictures that has come to Salem this year.

The original story from which the screen play of "The Stranger" was adapted was written by no less noteworthy an author than John Galsworthy, famous British author and playwright, under the title of "The First and the Last." So well did Galsworthy like the theme of this story that he used it three times: First as an abbreviated short story, next as a play, and finally as an elaborated short story. It was the first publication of it in the Cosmopolitan Magazine that attracted the attention of Joseph Henabery and paved the way for its present presentation on the screen.

If Galsworthy had deliberately set out to avoid all of the conventions of story telling he would have difficulty in finding a better theme or a more gripping series of situations, and the adaptors of the story have utilized all three of Galsworthy's treatments of the basic story in constructing their screen play. Situations that are intensely real and vital but startlingly at variance with the situations of the conventional drama were the things that attracted Henabery's attention at the time of his first reading and the same unique quality is destined to be one of the salient features of the finished picture.

To portray one of the quartet of principal characters in this story, Paramount called Betty Compson from England to be featured with Richard Dix, Lewis Stone and Tully Marshall. Robert Schable, Clarence Burton and Frank Nelson are a few of the capable players in the strong supporting cast.

WILLIAM H. TURNER GOES TO LONG HOME

Flight at an Early Hour Yesterday Morning

William H. Turner died at his home here at 837 South Twelfth street about 7:30 o'clock Wednesday morning following an illness of about three weeks. Since coming to the city from Portland in 1921 he had won a large number of friends by his pleasing personality. He was a member of Pacific Lodge No. 50, Masons, and of the Grotto. Funeral services will be held from the Webb funeral parlors at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, with Rev. Ward Willis Long officiating. Special music will be offered by the Eastern Star sextette. Interment will be made in the City View cemetery.

William Turner was born in Bellingham, Wash., January 11, 1892. He is survived by his wife and two children, Margaret, age 9, and George, age 7; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Turner, of Chicago, who arrived here at 10 o'clock last night, and learned only upon arrival that the pale rider had outridden them in their sad journey across the country; a sister, Mrs. A. E. Spindt of Pallasades, Wash., and a brother, Richard Turner, also of Chicago. Deceased was a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Black, of Portland, Oregon.

After working here at first for the Oldsmobile agency, Mr. Turner entered the employ of the O.U.O. J. Wilson motor company, where he was working until his illness.

"Bill" Turner, as he was known to his family, had made a host of friends in Salem. He was every inch a gentleman, in all the term implies. He was a good husband, a loving father, a true friend in whom there was no guile. He loved his friends with an abiding faithfulness like unto that of Damon for Pythias. He loved life and its clean and innocent enjoyments. It seems a pity that such a character should have to depart so early for the fields of asphodel beyond the stars. But "Bill" Turner went into the brighter land unafraid, with a smile on his lips, and as with a wave of his hand anticipated a reunion in the far country that will endure throughout all the cycles of time.

Edith Black was the maiden name of Mrs. Turner. She has for a long time been bed ridden, but of late hopes have been entertained of her complete recovery. She had been healthy and strong till attacked by a malady that has made her unable to walk.
