THREE RECIPES

JELLIED CHICKEN BOULLION—Use well-seasoned stock from fowl of Sunday. Soak three teaspoons granulated gelatin in four tablespoons cold water for five minutes. Dissolve in four tablespoons boiling water and two cups hot strained chicken stock. Chill. Beat slightly with a fork and serve in bouillon cups.

CASSEROLE OF CHOPS—Use loin pork, veal or lamb chops cut thick. Clean and dice carrots and white turnips; add sliced onions, peas and seasonings of peppercorns, whole clove, allspice, pinch of sage, minced parsley, salt and pepper. Lay half the vegetables in a deep casserole together with one cup boiling salted water. Stock; roll the chops in flour and brown well on both sides in a hot skillet; then lay them on top of the vegetables, cover with remainder and simmer an hour. Thicken the gravy slightly if necessary.

FRESH FRUIT PIE—Line a pie-plate with standard pastry; mix four cups berries, four tablespoons flour, one and one-half cups sugar and one teaspoon salt; turn into a plate and dot with two tablespoons butter in small bits; cover with a second crust, putting the pastry on loosely to prevent "running" of juice.—From the Designer Magazine for July.

KING TUT'S TOMB HAS A RIVAL HERE

A Prehistoric Mound on the Mountain Road Ten Miles East of Mehama

There is a prehistoric mound 75 feet deep, 75 feet long and 60 feet wide, 10 miles above Mehama, on the mountain road leading to Elkhorn and the mining region on eastward. The mound is on the south side of the Little North Fork of the Santiam river, and right on the bank of that stream. The road passes within 50 feet of the mound.

Thinks It a Tomb

The land on which this mound stands was formerly owned by Newell Quimby, father-in-law of the present owner, Charles Findley, whose present address is Mehama, Oregon. Mr. Findley was born in Buena Vista, Oregon, but he has spent the last ten years in California.

Newell Quimby, the former owner, believed that this prehistoric mound was a tomb of some dignitary of a long extinct race. He held to this belief while he lived, and on his death bed charged his wife to never part with the 40 acres on which the mound stands.

Mr. Findley conceived the idea that the mound is the tomb of two people, and that there are valuable articles in the tomb.

So he has been digging and blasting a tunnel into the interior of the mound. He has gone in about 50 feet, and he is working away faithfully every day at his self imposed task.

He Is Certain About It

He has built up a theory that the stones that form the mound were put there by human hands, in regular courses, and cemented together. He has found nine different shades of this cement, some of them reddish, as if formed partly of the blood of animals. He does not say this, but the inference of one man who examined the mound and the cement between the stones is that the blood may be the blood of the enemies of the tribe killed in battle.

Any way, that is the theory, as it now stands. The mound may be made up of rocks that slipped off of the top of the nearby mountain. But Mr. Findley believes otherwise, and he is so firm in his belief that he has been spending many weary months in boring in to the mound—and many dollars for blasting powder. He is camped with his family near the mound.

He says that new indications are cropping out the past few days confirming his theory. Among them, he says, is the hollow sounds he gets when using a hammer on the walls of the tunnel he is making. He is confident that, in case he finds this mound a prehistoric tomb, with the disclosures from the long past which he expects to discover in it, to say nothing of possible gold and silver and
