BISHOP JOLTS CLUB IN PORTLAND; GAME HERE RE-SCHEDULED

Brooklyn Team Mixes War Paint When Salem Manager Twits Manager for Running Out—Fulton Steps Out, so Battle of Bitter Rivals Can Take Place Here Sunday

Biddy Bishop has brought the Portland semi-professional baseball clubs up-standing. So much so that the speedy Brooklyn club, which earlier in the week canceled a game scheduled with the Senators for next Sunday, called Bishop by telephone and asked to be allowed to come.

It looks as if Brooklyn is coming in its most lurid war paint—all because of a jolt that Bishop handed the Portland clubs yesterday through the columns of the Portland News. It happened like this:

The Montavilla club was scheduled with the Senators for next Sunday in Salem. Monday the Montavilla manager called Bishop and told him that because of the loss of players who had signed up for the fall tournament in Portland it would be impossible for him to bring his club to Salem.

The Portland news article, quoting Bishop, follows: "Biddy Bishop, the peppery manager of the Salem Senators, is a trifle burnt up over several items that have appeared in local papers stating that the Senators have been side-stepping many fast ball clubs that have a good chance to knock 'em over and grab the $150 purse offered to any team that can make 'em sing baby baby shoes."

"We had two games with Portland clubs, the Montavilla and Brooklyn teams, and both called off their games on account of having their best players join teams in the fall baseball tournament."
