Members of Special Congressional Committee Seeking Data on Uncle Sam's Aircraft Facilities

Members of the congressional committee appointed to make a thorough examination of the government's aircraft facilities visited the Anacostia naval air station and the army air service station at Bolling field to get first-hand information. This photograph shows the group of investigators with Admiral Moffett at Anacostia field. In the group are Representative Lampert, chairman of the committee, and Representatives R. F. Reid, R. S. Prall and P. C. O'Sullivan.

connections. Some large figures were mentioned as to the amounts of wheat sold during the day and while there was considerable buying by seaboard interests and cash houses, accurate estimates could not be made.

Corn and oats likewise were affected by liquidation, prices of corn declining more than three cents in some instances, only to recover in the late trading. Weather conditions were favorable for the growth of corn and the movement in the latter increasing rapidly.

Provisions broke sharply early on selling of lard by commission houses, part of which was attributed to sympathy with cotton seed oil and a drop in hog values. There was good support on the break and a rally ensued.

Zane Grey Story to Be Shown at Oregon

Presented entirely in natural colors by the famous technicolor process "Wanderers of the Wasteland," perhaps the most popular novel ever written by Zane Grey, comes to the Oregon theatre tomorrow, and will remain on the screen there through Thursday and Friday and Saturday.

"Wanderers of the Wasteland" is the first picture of any length to be done in natural colors, and marks a new step in the production of motion pictures. The selection of this western story was particularly fortunate, in that the settings for the picture are well adapted to demonstrate fully the possibilities of color photography. Practically all the scenes were taken in the Arizona desert and in Death Valley, California, and their famed colorings are brought out vividly in the pictures.

The story of the film gives that gripping dramatic element without which no picture could succeed in retaining interest. The plot, already known to the millions who have read the book, deals with the gold days of California and Nevada and is wonderfully portrayed. Jack Holt, Kathlyn Williams, Noah Berry and James Jordon are some of the stars whose names appear in the cast.
