

ELDON QUINLAND THOUGHT DROWNED

Clothing and Bicycle Found on Bank—Lad Missing Since Monday

Eldon Quinland, 14, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Quinland, of Salem, is believed to have met his death by drowning in the Willamette river some time Monday afternoon, and two grapplers spent several hours yesterday in an effort to locate his body. The grappling was begun about 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and continued until after dark. Mr. Quinland is chief engineer at the state prison.

Young Quinland left home shortly after noon Monday with the intention of seeking work in the Polk county hop yard on the Salem-Dallas road. He failed to appear at home that night, and his parents believed that he had spent the night at the hop yard. Yesterday they communicated with the hop ranch and found that he had not arrived.

When men engaged in handling the logs on the river reported that a bicycle and a pile of clothing were lying on the bank of the river near the swimming hole, about 100 yards west of the railroad crossing at West Salem, Mr. Quinland went to the place and identified the clothing and bicycle as belonging to his son. The men noticed the articles there Monday afternoon but did not become suspicious until they were seen again Tuesday morning.

As far as can be learned, Eldon was alone at the time. It is believed that he became warm from his ride and stopped to take a swim, a sport of which he is very fond and in which he was proficient for a boy of his age. Mr. Quinland was able to find tracks leading from the little pile of clothes to the springboard. There was nothing else.

Owing to the nature of the water the task of locating the body is difficult. The swimming hole is located on an eddy, several hundred feet long and extending well out into the river, which is from 10 to 18 feet deep. Eldon did not take his bathing suit with him and as his clothes were all on the bank, it is supposed that his body is nude. This fact adds difficulty in the grappling work.

Several trustees in charge of guards relieved volunteer workers in the afternoon and remained at their task during the night. In an effort to find the body a spotlight and storage battery were employed. It is understood that no attempt will be made to float the body by using dynamite.

TWO BOYS WILL BE SENTENCED TODAY

learned safely to his hotel. Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman said today that he had received three anonymous letters, the writers of which threatened to blow up the jail and the court building if Loeb and Leopold are not sentenced to be hanged.

Should the verdict be a penitentiary sentence, the sheriff declared the boys will be taken to Joliet as soon as consistent with the law.

Lawyers Talk With Boys
Attorneys Clarence S. Darrow and Benjamin Bachrach spent this evening in a last minute conference with their young clients. The conversation was long and was conducted in whispers. Afterwards the lawyers refused to discuss the nature of their talk. When pressed for a statement, Mr. Darrow remarked that he "did not see how Judge Caverly can impose the death sentence on the boys in view of their age and pleas of guilty."

Previously to the visit of their counsel, Loeb and Leopold had discussed several subjects, including their own situation with fellow prisoners and newspaper men. Neither appeared disturbed or excited, Loeb having regained his self-composure, obviously lacking yesterday.

Leopold wanted to bet a penny that they would be sent to Joliet but was restrained from doing so by the interference of a jail guard.

When they cross the bridge that connects the jail with the court building the two will have two guards a piece. They will be with the youths from the time they awaken tomorrow until some time late in the day. No special reason was given for doubling the guard excepting the indication that an attempt might be made by persons intending to harm them to break through the police lines to reach them.

King Show Makes Hit at Bligh Theatre

The King Musical Comedy company which opened at the Bligh theatre Monday night, has made a decided hit with local theatergoers and last night played to a capacity house. The show opened with several high class vaudeville acts, followed by a fast comedy bit, "Shean's Honeymoon," which is interspersed with musical numbers and specialties.

Outstanding features of the show is the exotic dances presented by Miss Marjorie King, a late dancing star with the Shubert's Productions, New York, and Miss Gene Metcalf, prima donna, who, aside from being a clever performer, has a wonderful lyric-soprano voice and wears gorgeous gowns.

The show girls in the chorus are graceful dancers and the numbers won't give the audience a moment's rest. The comedians, Lew Marshall and Eddie Haywood, kept the audience in uproarious laughter from the time the curtain went up until it was rung down on the final scene.

Altogether the show is one of the best that has come to the Bligh for a long time and there is but little doubt that they will play to full houses during their engagement.

Manager Bligh announces that on Thursday afternoon a special matinee will be given in which the King company will present an entire new show with new numbers and specialties.

EDUCATION IS TRAWIN THEME

Religious Phase of Instruction Emphasized by Baptist Speaker

At the First Baptist church last night Rev. C. L. Trawin, of McMinnville delivered an address on religious education to an audience that filled the church, and which was listened to with very close attention.

He gave as a suggested definition for education the following: "Education is a directive process of training individuals to live together in our wonder world." This he illustrated by a sentence from the old school grammar: "Miss Brown is teaching John history."

The old idea of education was represented in the old system of diagraming and made Miss Brown the subject and history the object, with John the indirect object. "Miss Brown was teaching history (to) John," but the new idea of education change the process entirely, and "Miss Brown is teaching John by means of history." "We do not teach the Bible. We teach the individual, using the Bible as the tool by which the individual is taught about God," he said. "Education is the process of building up character. A man may be efficiently educated but yet not sufficiently educated. Men must be trained to live together with each other. A great European nation was efficiently educated, but not sufficiently educated, and hence the terrible results of recent years. Here God comes in, and the moment we mention God we overlook the public school. The church and the public school cannot overlap in this field."

"The state must do its full measure, and has long recognized its responsibility. The church has been slow to assume its obligation. There are 53 millions of children of school age, and only one out of three receive any religious education, and those who do receive such education have an average of but 17 1-2 hours a year taking all religious organizations as a basis for such computation. The best seers of the educational movement recognize that Solomon said the last word for every age when he declared, train up a child in the way he should go, and even when he is old he will not depart from it."

"The great commission uttered by Jesus was to go into all nations and teach (not preach) every creature. When he would answer the question of who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven, he called a little child and set him in the midst of his disciples. He places in the church the responsibility. Every child must be taught the facts concerning the kingdom of God, and the church must assume its share of such instruction."

The state cannot do it, but the state and the church must join hands, not in an organized unity, but in cooperative effort to train citizens to live together in God's wonder world. It is our wonder-world men, black men, red men, white men, as life becomes more and more complex and we are brought closer together in modern society."

This morning the program begins at 9:30 and continues through the morning and afternoon. The public is invited to the sessions.

MAINE ELECTION SENDS STOCK UP

Rise in Stock Is Generally Construed as Reflection of Satisfaction

Stock prices bounded upward today in what was generally construed as a reflection of Wall street's satisfaction with the Maine election results. Opening gains in the popular industrial and railroad issues ranged from one to four and a half points and these were fairly well maintained despite occasional flurries of selling throughout the rest of the session.

With a large short interest built up in the drop of the last two weeks, technical conditions also were ripe for a rally. It was one of the sharpest since the unexpected declaration of an extra dividend on U. S. Steel common last fall. Sales in the first half hour approximated one quarter of a million shares, but the market turned dull after the first batch of buying orders had been absorbed, the day's sales aggregating about 850,000 shares.

Foreign exchange staged a vigorous upturn under the leadership of sterling, which rallied about 3c to around 4.45, before selling back to 4.44 1-4.

Call money ruled at 2 per cent throughout the day. Time funds were in plentiful supply at rates ranging from 2 3-4 to 3 1-2 per cent. Commercial paper was quiet at 3 1-4 to 3 1-2 percent.
