with word that Tom Murray, Florence bank robber, had cached a portion of his loot near Seaside. He offered to go to Seaside, in company with guards, and locate the loot, having, he said an approximate idea as to its location. The request was denied. Finding of a paper of peculiar design in the hog lot where Sherman discarded his clothing and of some similar paper near the swimming hole near West Salem was reported from the prison yesterday and tended to strengthen the theory that the boy and convict are together. As no possible clew has been overlooked Mr. Quinland left for Seaside yesterday. No actual race of the lad has been found since he disappeared a week ago yesterday, though the drowning theory is becoming weaker and weaker as the days pass and his body is not discovered.
