"A Penny for Your Thoughts"

How often have you heard the above saying?

BUT HERE'S THE LATEST

5000 PENNIES

For Your Thoughts

$50 For a Single IDEA

THE DUNDEE WOOLEN MILLS want a live publicity stunt to start off their Fall advertising campaign, and they are giving 5000 pennies or a Fifty Dollar Bill to the man, woman or child who suggests the best stunt.

DO YOU WANT THAT FIFTY? Just put on the old "thinking cap" and get busy. It isn't hard to think of a good stunt, and we'll back a good idea to the limit.

Anyone Can Win the 5,000!

No one is barred from this contest except employes of our stores. Anyone who can think of a good publicity stunt, who can write, and who will bring that writing to our store has an equal chance for the prize. You don't have to know anything about advertising or the clothing business. JUST GET AN IDEA * BIG OR LITTLE — AND TAKE THE FIVE THOUSAND PENNIES.

ASK YOURSELF THIS QUESTION

"If I were The Dundee Woolen Mills, what would I do to get 5,000 people in front of my store?"

Your answer may win the 5000 pennies

Contest Rules

- Idea must be written out in full.
- Bring or mail it to The Dundee Woolen Mills, custom Tailors and the home of the 500 All Wool Patterns.
- There is no word limit and the contestants can submit as many ideas as they wish. Submit them on separate sheets.
- Judges will be the advertising managers of the Statesman and Journal and the advertising director of the Pacific Coast Dundee Stores.
- In case of a tie, the contestant who first got his idea to us will be judged the winner.
- Contest will close October 6th, giving you two short weeks to build up your stunt.

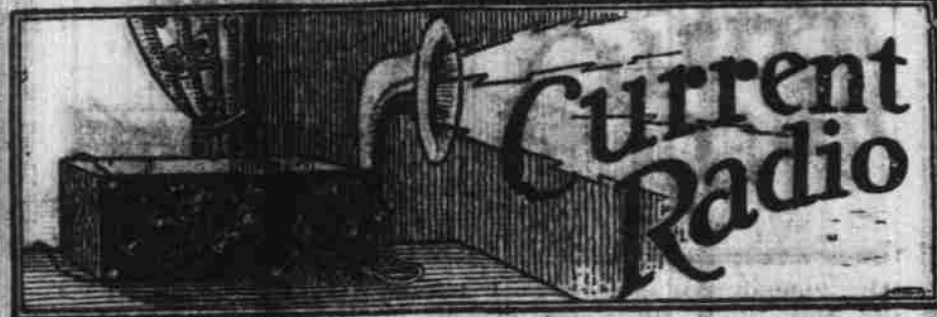

A SUGGESTION

See our windows—come in, look at our store, ask questions—we like to answer them; then go home, put on your thinking cap and give us an idea that will win that 5000 pennies.

A Handy Combination One-Tube Receiver

Yesterday we said that as far as actual results were concerned, there was very little difference between any of the many so-called "new" one-tube circuits that appear from time to time. This is presupposing that good instruments and careful workmanship is used in each.

There is, however, a difference between the results attained with a single-circuit tuner and the results attained with some form of coupled circuit. In the single-circuit we get loud signals; in the coupled circuit we get selective tuning. Of the two, selective tuning is more desirable in these days of much interference, but there are times when there is no interference, and when a single-circuit with its greater signal response would be decided welcome.

With this in mind we have designed a "combination" single-circuit and coupled-circuit tuner. Before going into detail regarding this set, however, we will show two tried and tested forms of single and coupled circuits that may be built by the novice with the assurance that they will be as good as any other single-tube sets now in use.

In Fig. 1 is the standard form of coupled circuit, while in Fig. 2 is the standard form of single-circuit. In each case tickler regeneration is used, mostly for the reason that it is easier to build than a variometer. In Fig. 3 we have shown our combination circuit. If you will follow out the diagram, you will see that when the switch "S" is on point "P" we have a coupled circuit, while if we switch over to point "M" we have a single circuit. The former is to be used ordinarily, or during periods of interference; while the latter may be used when the air is free from interference and when loudest signals are desired.

In Fig. 3, "P-1" is the primary, which may be eight turns of wire on a 3-inch rotor ball at one end of the secondary winding. "SC" is the secondary, and may be 45 turns of No. 18 d.c.c. wire on a 3 5/8 inch cardboard tube. The tap for the single-circuit connection is at the eighteenth turn from the bottom of the coil. "SC-1" is the tuning condenser, and is a 23-plate variable. The tickler "T" may be 18 or 20 turns of No. 26 d.c.c. wire on a 2 3/4 inch cardboard rotor located at the other end of the secondary coil from the primary "P-1." Former Resident of Salem Passes Away in Portland

Mr. Joseph A. Sellwood who died in Portland yesterday morning at the home of his daughter removes from Salem one of its pioneers. He came here in 1866 when only 13 age. He was born in Mundon, Ill., Feb. 13, 1843. Mr. Sellwood's father was the first rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church and the son has been a constant attendant at the services of St. Paul's through the years, and it was his delight to live to see the new church built. He used to relate his experiences coming through the Isthmus of Panama when a boy and was in the massacre of April 15, 1856.

As a boy he attended the Salem schools and the Willamette university from which he graduated in 1866. He then took up teaching and was for some time at the Chemawa Indian school. For four years he was assistant postmaster.

He was a member of the Salem Grange and A. O. U. W. Mrs. Sellwood died Sept. 9, 1923.

He leaves two sons and two daughters, W. H. Sellwood, Harold E. Sellwood and Mrs. Ethel Adams of Portland, also Mrs. Lillian W. Henry of Roseburg.

He will be buried on Monday at 2 p. m. from St. Paul's church of which he was the senior warden for many years.

The body will lie in state in the church from 12 noon until 1:30 p.

m., when the casket will be closed not to be opened again.
