can publisher is said to have sent him a blank check so that he could fix his own price for a book of court reminiscences. The check was torn up and thrown into the waste paper basket. In the good old days when King Edward was Prince of Wales was doing what he could to dispel the gloom which enshrouded the mid-Victorian court, Lord Knollys was often the butt of the practical jokes which the heir to the throne and his set dearly enjoyed. On one occasion Lord Knollys had the laugh on his side at the expense of one of the practical jokes of the royal set. "Bay" Middleton, the famous sportsman, had a penchant for catching a friend by the tail-tails and ripping the garment to the neck. Lord Knollys one evening offered a particularly tempting chance to Capt. Middleton, which was at once seized upon, to the great amusement of the Prince of Wales who, however, was surprised to observe Lord Knollys' unconcern. On inquiring why his secretary did not seem to mind the ruin of a perfectly good coat, the Prince of Wales was informed by Lord Knollys that, concerning Capt. Middleton's intentions, he had taken the precaution of borrowing one of the captain's coats for the evening.

ENGLAND WATCHES DIRECTORIAN'S PASS Recent Death of Probyn and Knollys Reminds of Old Order's Change LONDON, Sept. 10.—The death of Lord Knollys, following closely that of the venerable Sir Dighton Probyn, is another reminder that the great Edwardian circle is drawing in. Both Lord Knollys and Sir Dighton spent their long lives in the service of England's royal family. Lord Knollys, formerly trusted confidant of Queen Victoria, served the late King Edward for more than 40 years as private secretary, a capacity in which he also served King George until the weight of years forced his retirement. His contemporary, Sir Dighton Probyn for many years comptroller of the household of the late sovereign, in fulfillment of a promise he made to King Edward when the latter was dying, continued on in the same capacity with the widowed Queen Alexandra. The Queen Mother, now going on 80 years, and herself in feeble health, is bowed with grief at the loss within a short space of time of two trusted friends. Queen Alexandra is in the seclusion of Sandringham, and so great a her infirmities that her friends conclude she will not again appear in public. The servant of three sovereigns of two of them in a very confidential capacity, the recipient of many royal confidences, the possessor of many court secrets, Lord Knollys had a diversified character and a wide knowledge of the world and its ways. He knew King Edward in all his moods and was that sovereign's trusted companion when he was Prince of Wales. No offer could ever tempt Lord Knollys to divulge any of the material in his possession concerning what went on in inner court circles, with the life of which he had intimate knowledge. An Ameri-
