AUDRED BUNCH

PHONE: 106

MISS CORNELIA MARVIN, state librarian, will have charge today of the afternoon's informing talk when the Daughters of the American Revolution meet for their regular October program. Mrs. Harry M. Styles, 780 North Summer street, will be the hostess.

Miss Marvin, with authority based on considerable travel, will take as her subject International Relations. The members of Chemeketa chapter are especially anticipating Miss Marvin's treatment of the subject.

The Fairmount Hill club met for a delightful afternoon of bridge Thursday at the home of Mrs. Earl Percy. Attractive bouquets of asters and dahlias were used in a decorative manner about the rooms, where two tables of the card diversion were in play. Guests of the club for the day were: Mrs. Luther Wells of Spokane and Mrs. A. C. F. Perry.

Mrs. E. T. B. Hill won the afternoon's high score, the consolation award going to Mrs. Luther Wells.

A buffet luncheon was served at the conclusion of the afternoon.

Those present were Mrs. George H. Grabenhorst, Mrs. E. T. B. Hill, Mrs. E. J. Huffman, Mrs. Lester L. Laws, Mrs. Lawrence Oberer, Mrs. H. K. Stockwell, Mrs.

J. C. Schur, Mrs. Luther Wells, Mrs. A. C. F. Perry and the hostess, Mrs. Earl Percy.

Mrs. B. E. Carrier, who left the first of September for the east in company with her niece, Mrs. Charles Hays of Portland, is now visiting with relatives in Brookwell, Pa. Mrs. Carrier will be a guest of Miss Lucille Crockett at Syracuse, N. Y. and of her nephew Dr. Joseph Bell, an interne at the Pennsylvania hospital in New York city, before returning home the last part of the month.

The Piety Hill club, one of the most interesting of Salem's social groups, met for the first autumn meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. E. Kirk, with Mrs. E. T. Barnes and Mrs. Kirk the hostesses. Mrs. Russell Catila was elected to succeed Mrs. John H. Albert, retiring president, the club having just the one office.

The afternoons will be devoted to sewing for the Children's farm home at Corvallis.

Vivid zinnias, with bowls of late roses were used attractively in the rooms where a late afternoon luncheon was served. Mrs. E. C. Cross assisted the hostess.

Mrs. E. K. Benchley of Fullerton, Cal., was a guest of the afternoon.

The matrons having membership in the club are: Mrs. William Brown, Mrs. John H. Albert, Mrs. R. P. Boise, Mrs. Russell Catlin, Mrs. E. C. Cross, Mrs. E. Hartley, Mrs. T. B. Kay, Mrs. Ercel Kay, Mrs. W. P. Fowle, Mrs. W. E. Kirk, Mrs. E. T. Barnes, Mrs. S. P. Kimball, Mrs. C. L. Lewis, Mrs. F. W. Spencer, Mrs. C. H. Robertson, Mrs. E. C. Patton, Mrs. H. B. Thielson, Mrs. J. T. Whittig and Mrs. C. K. Spaulding.

Miss Frances M. Richards has issued cards for what will be one of the most attractive affairs of the university season when on Friday afternoon, Oct. 10, she will be at home to all college maids, from 3:30 until 5:30 o'clock, at Lausanne hall.

Mrs. Luther Wells and daughter Dorothy of Spokane were dinner guests last evening of Mrs. Earl Percy.

Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. L. Gleason, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. J. William Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Gregory and Dan Langenberg were guests in Vancouver, Wash., yesterday, attending the Inter-city Rotary meeting.

Yesterday the state officers, district deputies and grand regents of the Catholic Daughters of America throughout Oregon opened their meeting in Salem at the Marion hotel, beginning at 10:30 a. m. Dr. Nicholson of the Catholic National Welfare council will be the principal speaker at the business meeting today. Miss Genevieve Ryan of Portland will preside as state regent of the organization. On Sunday the Salem Daughters will be hostesses to the visitors at a 1:30 luncheon in McCornack hall. At this meeting Dr. Nicholson and Miss Duffy, a waitress worker for the city of Portland, will speak to the Salem Daughters and visitors. The state officers who will be present are Miss Genevieve Ryan of Portland, Mrs. F. X. Schaefer of Eugene, Mrs. J. J. Keber of Mt. Angel, and Mrs. A. A. Mickel of Salem. District deputies are Mrs. Joseph Traxwa of Eugene, Miss M. Augusta Fember of Portland and Mrs. Keber of Mt. Angel.

Grand regents are Mrs. Pearl McMannama of Astoria, Mrs. Marie Koenig of Roseburg, Miss Grace Hirschbuhl of Portland, Mrs. Hazel Courtney of Woodburn, Miss Anna Erwert of Mt. Angel, and Mrs. Mickel of Salem.

One of the motives of the conference is to plan for a greater Catholic Daughters of America organization in Oregon, as the slogan of the national courts is: "Two hundred thousand members and 1,000 courts in 1924."

Election of officers, and the making of plans for a bazaar later in the season, was the business in hand at the meeting of St. Monica's Altar society this week. The officers elected were: President, Mrs. Richard Dibb; first vice president, Mrs. A. E. Huckestein; second vice president, Mrs. Thomas McCallin; recording secretary, Mrs. E. A. Pruitt; financial secretary, Mrs. A. M. Lane; treasurer, Mrs. Josephine Suling.

The year's managing committee includes Mrs. Joseph Lebold, chairman; Mrs. C. D. Thomas and Miss M. Lebold.

The Harvest Home "get together" and supper for all the members and friends of St. Paul's parish will be held on Monday evening in the parish house at 6:30 o'clock when the supper will be served. A musical program will be rendered and the evening will be spent in sociability. Strangers are invited and this is an occasion for all to get acquainted.

A group of Corvallis young people attending the young people's gathering here held in connection with the Congregational state conference included Miss Ethel Hollister, Miss Agnes Brightman, Miss Mildred Newton, Harlow G. Atwood, John Logan, Delmer M. Goode, Albert S. Skidmore, Mr. Fleming and Harold Merrill.

Dean and Mrs. George H. Alden will open their home this evening at the dinner hour for all members of the Willamette university faculty. The affair promises to be particularly enjoyable.

Dr. Ralph D. Bisbee was a dinner guest yesterday evening at the Kappa Gamma Rho fraternity house. Dr. Bisbee while here is

The Salem Heights Progressive Woman's club met for an unusually well-attended meeting at the community house yesterday afternoon, the gathering being the first of the club season. The ladies complimented Mrs. B. E. Heikes, who is soon leaving the community to make her home in Dallas, with a handkerchief shower.

Ronald Gloyer, attorney, was the speaker of the afternoon, dealing in an interesting manner with legislative matters of current importance.

Mrs. George Wenderoth and Miss Chappel of Corvallis were both speaker-guests for the afternoon. Mrs. Wenderoth, president of the Marion County Parent-Teachers' association, presenting announcements relative to the coming convention, and Miss Chappel speaking in the interest of the Smith-Hughes act, and the organization of vocation classes.

Autumn flowers were used in the decorating. The hostesses of the afternoon included: Mrs. Jennie Bartlett, Mrs. Irene Burnside, Mrs. Washburn, and the president, Mrs. Alice Edmundson.

Monday night from 6:30 to 7:30 Miss Nina McNary's first class will be held at the Y. W. C. A. parlors. Miss McNary's Bible class has had several years of successful meetings and is anticipating a very helpful series of lessons for this winter. At the meetings Monday evening the class will decide upon the time of meeting for this year, and the course of lessons to be studied. All young women are cordially invited to come and join the class, and take part in the discussions which will be of great interest to all.

Entertaining for Miss Esther Paroungian and Mr. Ralph Barnes, Dr. and Mrs. F. G. Franklin were hosts last evening at their home, 1355 Ferry street, for an enjoyable gathering of friends. A number of interesting program numbers were features of the evening.

Tribute Is Paid to Father of Lumberman

SILVERTON, Ore., Oct. 3. — All was quiet at the Silver Falls Timber company holdings at Silverton and at Westport Wednesday afternoon while at Watertown, Wis., were read the funeral services of Marshall J. Woodard, the father of M. C. Woodard, who is manager of the Silver Falls Timber company holding at Silverton. The elder Mr. Woodard, although retired from active business in the lumber world, was until his death Saturday, a prominent stockholder. M. C. Woodard had but just returned to Silverton from Watertown, where he had gone to celebrate his father's 94th birthday, when he was notified of his father's serious illness. He left at once, this time accompanied by his daughter Miss Catherine Woodard, and reached there while the elder Mr. Woodard was yet alive.

CHAPTER 28
THE WAY JUNIOR GOT MADGE INTO TROUBLE AND OUT AGAIN

Either Mother Graham must have slept more soundly than usual or Katie's keyhole-stopping under my direction must have been especially efficacious. At any rate, Lillian's fear that she might smell the coffee and depend upon us proved to be unfounded, and the lunch which Katie served us was undisturbed.

The question with which he awakened me, was, however, not one to bring much ease to my mind. With a groaned, insistent voice he made his bewildered, sorrowful plea:

"Mama! Where Daddy gone? Dooner want him come back so-o hard."

I cuddled him closer to me as I answered him gently:

"Daddy'll be here just as soon as he can sweetheart."

"Will he come today?"

"No, not today."

"Tomorrow?"

"I'm afraid not, dear."

"Make him tum home."

"When will he come?"

The persistent little voice showed signs of breaking.

Hot, unreasoning anger at Dicky rose in my heart. The rancor I felt because of his silence—I had received only one brief, unsatisfactory letter from him since his departure for the wonderful Adirondack camp to which he had been invited—blamed me so that I lost sight of the fact that the trip was in reality on business. Although I knew he had gone for a discussion of drawings with the camp owner, a noted author, whose next book Dicky was to illustrate, I felt, aggrievedly, that he was staying away purposely from his baby boy.

But I could not betray anger at Dicky before his adoring little son. So I made my voice tender instead of stern, and murmured softly:

"Mother doesn't know, but it will be soon—just as soon as Daddy can possibly get away."

Junior pouted adorably. Junior is indifferent.

"Daddy had mans to stay away from Dooner," he announced. "Make him tum home, Mama."

"I'll try," I promised, knowing the futility of argument. Already my little lad has a very decided will of his own.

Junior considered this for a minute. Then, evidently sensing the hollowness of the promise, he dug his fists into his eyes and began to howl loudly and wholeheartedly.

"I want my Daddy! I want my Daddy!"

"Hush, darling!" I took his tiny hands in mine, and kissed his tear-wet face. "Mother's here, won't Mother do?"

"Don't want you!" with a burst of baby temper. "I want my daddy," and he renewed his howls.

I was afraid he would arouse the house, and I tried a ruse which never fails with Junior.

"Very well," I said coldly, getting out of bed, "if Junior dops'nt want Mother she will have to go away, too."

He stopped open-mouthed, in the middle of a yell, scrambled up, and jumped frantically for me, clinging to me with arms and legs.

"Don't go away, Mama," he pleaded. "Dooner be good boy."

"Margaret!" My mother-in-law's voice sounded sternly from the doorway. "I should think you would select some other time to exhibit your senseless jealousy of the baby's preference for Rickard than when for his father."

She advanced toward me and held out her arms, with eyes fixed plyingly upon Junior.

"Dannie's baby come to Dannie," she crooned. "Dannie won't go away."

I try very hard not to answer my mother-in-law when she gives way to her capricious temper, as I was able to keep my lips closed at her unjust accusation. But would have been less than human had I not rejoiced fiercely when Junior spoke with superb indifference:

"I don't want you. Go away. just want my mama."
