EAGERNESS TO BE in the audience when Professor Horace Mahkopf gives his dramatic interpretation of the inimitable Barrie's well-loved comedy, "What Every Woman Knows" is steadily increasing on the part of interested Salem people. The Salem Woman's club is sponsoring the production, with Professor Mahkopf in the characterizing roles.

"What Every Woman Knows" is perhaps the best known of all 12 of Barrie's plays, but Barrie in every line he writes is delightful. Who can forget the tenderness of Margaret Ogilvy? Who doesn't remember the charm of the pictures found in "Quality Street?" And, as for "What Every Woman Knows," who ever heard of anyone going away from it disappointed?

William Lyon Phelps says, writing of this admirable four-act comedy, "For sheer audacity, it would be difficult to parallel the opening of 'What Every Woman Knows.'" Phelps means, in particular, that a silence for the space of seven full minutes follows the raising of the curtain. Phelps expresses it as a large "confidence in his audience" on the part of the playwright, elaborating on how foolhardy it would be for anyone but a Barrie to imitate it.

The delightful setting is Scotch. The play opens with the two men at the dambrod, two bachelors, David and James, "who all their lives have been afraid of nothing but women." Allick is in the scene, and soon comes Missie.

The second act resumes the play at the end of six years. John Shand becomes a prominent figure in events, John Shand stands "for refinement," with this exception: he is the same Shand who mislabeled David six years before. The comedienne is B. F. Ryan, who is the star of the audience to meet early in the second act.

In speaking of the construction of the play, Mr. Phelps says that it is "as near perfection as the human mind can make it; the unexpected happens in every scene, just as it does in history."

The third act grows quite tense, quite tremendous, yet with, as Phelps puts it, "not even a penumbra of melodrama."

Maude Adams gave this play in 1899 in New Haven before a jammed theater audience. It is a play that by its own intrinsic worth draws a crowd. It is "a profound revelation of the evil and the sublimity hidden in every man and woman."

COSTUME RECITAL BY GRACE WOOD JESS AGAIN WINS HER APPROVAL OF MUSIC LOVERS

By VERA BRADY SHIPMAN

With becoming costume for each group of folk songs which ranged from Kentucky mountaineering tunes through plantation songs and Creole hits of other days, Grace Wood Jess entertained her audience last night at the First Christian church in a costume recital. Visualized folk songs the program called it. And the name did not belie, for with dramatic action and swinging rhythm she carried her listeners through the varied emotions of America's first songs.

Her spiritual "Nobody Knows the Trouble I See" was a moaning bit of sentiment, "Little David" carried you on in its fanciful wording. The bayou songs sang sweet crooning melodies, and Michele Banjo was a real bravado.

Her Russian songs were interlarded with Russian mazurka, and quaint high stepping in deep intonation. Her Russian death songs (much like Germany's Erl King) was accompanied by exceptionally finely blended solo themes.

A religious group from the Golden Legends, was dramatically the meeting this evening of the Daughters of Veterans when Mrs. Lucy Loose, department president, and Mrs. Nellie Martin, department secretary will both be present for their official, annual visit to the local tent. Both are of Portland, though Mrs. Loose will arrive from the southern part of the state where she has been the recent guest of 16 different tents. The veterans of the Grand Army as well as the Sons of Veterans are especially invited to meet with the Daughters for the occasion. The meeting will open at 8 o'clock at the Armory. Following a business meeting and a short program the president will give her address.

Light refreshments will be served, with the social committee in charge.

For next month the local tent is anticipating the visit of the department inspector, Mrs. Pearl Bostwick of Astoria.

Court Capital City No. 245 of the Catholic Daughters of America will count Saturday and Sunday as two eventful days of this year. On Saturday at 10:30 a. m. the business meeting of the state court was called to order at the Marlon hotel by State Regent Genevieve Ryan of Portland. The state officers, district deputies and grand regents from Astoria, Portland, Woodburn, Mt. Angel, Roseburg, Eugene and Salem were present. At the noon luncheon addresses were given by Rev. Edwin O'Hara, state chaplain of the intensive and a brief organ accompaniment played by Professor T. S. Roberts of Salem, gave an added spirit of fervor.

The final group of French folk songs came under her artistic swing and the audience was charmed.

Whether she played a bit of Kentucky Home on a jaded dulcimer, or sang of Spanish yesterdays, or lamented the loss of a beau, Grace Wood Jess pictured her songs with grandmother's curts, hands that motioningly talked, sympathetic and melodious voice, and each characterization was complete.

Accompaniments were beautifully played by Raymond McFeeters of Pasadena who played the entire program without music.

This young accompanist has the art of submerging his playing into the soloists individuality and should go far in his chosen profession.

Miss Jess will appear in Portland Thursday evening. Last night was her second appearance in Salem and she repeated her last season's success.

C. D. of A., Dr. Anna Nicholson, Ph. D. of Washington, D. C., Miss Marian Crowe of the board of directors of the state nurses' association, and Miss Margaret Duffy, recently of Chicago and at present a social welfare worker of the public welfare bureau of Portland.

On Sunday morning a breakfast was served at the home of Mrs. Eugene Eckerlin, Sr., by Court Capital City, with Mrs. E. Eckerlin, Mrs. J. G. Nadon, Mrs. B. F. Dimeler, Mrs. Albert O'Brien and Mrs. A. A. Mickel acting as hostesses, assisted by Mrs. E. A. Skelley and Mrs. Eugene Eckerlin, Jr., in serving. The rooms of the Eckerlin home were beautifully adorned with bright flowers of the early fall colors, the centerpiece of the breakfast table being in lavender and gold, with the rest of the appointments of the table in harmonious shades.

After breakfast the visitors were taken for a drive in and around Salem by the following committee: Mrs. Guy O. Smith, Mrs. E. Eckerlin, Mrs. C. Ringwald and Mrs. A. A. Mickel. The profusion of flowers and beautifully kept grounds of the different state institutions were commented upon by the visitors. At 1:30 o'clock in the McCormack hall Court Capital City again entertained the visitors with a luncheon. Mrs. M. J. Petzel, Mrs. Joseph Lebold, Mrs. M. Lane, Mrs. J. Suing and Mrs. L. Petzel acted as managing committee and Mrs. E. A. Thompson, Mrs. T. D. McClain, Mrs. I. R. Dibb, Mrs. S. Getzkow, Mrs. P. F. Kilian and the Misses K. Engel and T. Vogt as hostesses.

Miss Genevieve Ryan, state regent of the Daughters, gave a very interesting talk on "Qualifications for Membership." Miss Margaret Duffy, recently of Chicago and at present with the public welfare bureau of Portland, covered the topic, "Kind and Crisp Charity." Dr. Anna Nicholson addressed the assembly on "Girl Welfare." This subject proved a very interesting one and was ably and fluently handled by Dr. Nicholson, Ph. D.

The personnel of the visitors covering the two-day sessions were Rev. Edwin W. O'Hara, D.D., secretary of N. C. W. C. and state chaplain of the C. D. of A.; Dr. Anna Nicholson, Ph. D., organizer for the National Catholic Welfare council; Miss Marian Crowe, of the board of directors of the State Nurses' association; Miss Margaret Duffy of the public welfare bureau of Portland; Miss Genevieve Ryan of Portland, state regent; Mrs. F. K. Schaefer of Eugene, state secretary; Mrs. J. J. Keber of Mt. Angel, state treasurer; Mrs. A. A. Mickel of Salem, state advocate.

The district deputies in attendance were Mrs. Joseph Franawa of Eugene, Mrs. J. J. Keber of Mt. Angel, Miss M. Augusta Pember of Portland. The grand regents were Mrs. Pearl McManamara of Astoria, Mrs. Marie Koenig of Roseburg, Mrs. Grace Hirschbuhl of Portland, Mrs. Hazel Courtney of Woodburn, Miss Anna Erwert of Mt. Angel and Mrs. A. A. Mickel of Salem.

At the mid-Winter Institute which opened last evening in Portland, a conference similar to the summer Epworth League Institute, Rev. W. H. Hertzig will be the only out-of-Portland faculty member. He will conduct a course, with classes each Tuesday and Friday, in Stewardship.

Dear Mr. Dispenser of Finest Groceries: Please find enclosed not a common limerick—but something that says something. Natural, inborn modesty prevents me from doing the thing the justice, which it obviously and so plainly deserves. But as long as you are a man of good taste, honest, fearless and gifted with an eye for high-grade business getting poetry, you of course will not hesitate to eternalize this favorite child of a sleepless spent night.

More power to you,

There's no use of talking, it pays to go walking
