YDE REPEATS HIS DENIALS

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Emil Yde, pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates, reiterated his denials of having granted a newspaper interview pertaining to the recent attempts at bribery in the National league before Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner, here today. Mr. Landis, following the conference with Yde, expressed himself as satisfied with the player's statements and wired the Rockford, Ill., newspaper in which the original story appeared, asking for corrections of it and for equal publicity to Yde's statements of denial.

Word was sent here from Rockford tonight saying that the paper would stand by the authority for the Yde story and that in reply to Mr. Landis, the paper "has nothing to say."

Yde, whose home is in Freeport, Ill., near Rockford, tried three times to have an interview with responsible parties connected with the newspaper but failed to find out why the story was published and could not see the author of it, he told Mr. Landis today.

The interview intimated that Yde was not surprised when Dolan and O'Connell were barred from organized baseball by Mr. Landis following disclosures of an attempt to bribe Heinie Sand, Philadelphia National shortstop.

Congregational church to honor Miss Nellie Taylor on the occasion of her 80th birthday.

Miss Nellie Taylor was born at Warren, Wis., near Milwaukee, on October 19, 1844, the oldest of a family of four girls. She came west with her parents, crossing the plains in 1853, and locating at Oregon City. Later the family moved to Jacksonville, then to Portland, and finally to Salem. Miss Taylor has lived the past 50 years in Salem and vicinity. She was a teacher along the Columbia river at the time of the assassination of Lincoln. She was matron at the mute school and later a teacher there. For the past 30 years she has lived at her Polk county home.

Autumn flowers and foliage combined most beautifully to form a background for the lovely anniversary tea. The reception room was banked with leaves in all the vivid autumn tints. In the tea room a blue and yellow color scheme was effectively arranged, with marigolds in a blue basket centering the table. Yellow tapers in crystal holders were used. During the first hour Mrs. J. R. Chapman and Mrs. Sarah Patrick poured, with Miss Margaret Steiner and Miss Helen Darby assisting in the serving. The second hour the tea hostesses were Mrs. W. I. Staley and Mrs. S. P. Kimball. Miss Virginia Page and Miss Eloise Wright assisted. Hostesses for the final afternoon hour were Mrs. Ida Babcock and Mrs. McIntyre, with Miss Elva Franklin and Miss Frances Mapes assisting.

Delightful musical numbers were given throughout the afternoon by Mrs. Ira Derby, Mrs. Harry Styles, Mrs. Linfoot, Miss Maureen Styles, Miss Helen Darby and Miss Margaret Steiner.

A beautiful birthday cake, large enough that each guest might have a delectable slice, was the gift to Miss Taylor of the ladies of the First Congregational church.

Members of the Sweet Briar club acted as the afternoon's hostesses, the group including Mrs. Arthur Utley, Mrs. Corydon Blodgett, Mrs. William McCall, Mrs. M. C. Pettys, Mrs. Albert Steiner, Mrs. Ferd Allen, Mrs. Theodore Madsen, Mrs. Louis Grote, Mrs. Ed Pratt, Miss Nellie Taylor, Mrs. W. C. Franklin, Mrs. C. C. Page, Mrs. O. E. Moll, Mrs. James Imah, Mrs. Glen Adams, Mrs. Karl Kugel, Mrs. Ralph Allen and Mrs. A. Bunn.

The One Hour Dress Is Coming to Salem

Old theories are being jolted out of their snug complacency these days. Especially that time-honored and hoary-whiskered old fellow, "there's nothing new under the sun." Every day someone is taking a crack at him. And now from the Woman's Institute, Scranton, Pa., the largest school of dressmaking in the world, comes the news that a smart, attractive dress can be made in an hour. Think of it—a new dress measured, cut, sewed, fitted—completely finished in less than 60 minutes.

Local women will have the opportunity of learning this wonderful new method of making stylish, distinctive dresses, because Miller's has secured special permission from the Woman's Institute to make and exhibit the dress in Salem.

The one hour dress was designed by Mary Brooks Picken, director of instruction at the Woman's institute, to show women everywhere how easily they can make their own stylish clothes, when they have proper instruction. It is a smart, stylish dress, following closely the distinctive features of the season's most fashionable gowns, and yet amenable to countless variations to make it distinctively becoming to various types of women. There are 17 variations of the One Hour Dress and even these may be varied to suit one's taste.

To the skeptically-minded there is but one way out: see for yourself whether an attractive dress can be made in an hour. Demonstrations will be given at 10 to 11 a. m., and 2 to 3 p. m. all this week.

The thoroughness with which Miller's has prepared the demonstration and exhibition is exemplified by this announcement: Every woman who purchases material for a dress any day this week will receive absolutely free of charge an attractive instruction booklet giving step-by-step instructions for making the one hour dress in 17 variations.

STIMULATING TALK ON INTERIOR

—Keep it and all other pieces parallel to the wall in all cases—flat against the wall in preference to all other positions.

Consider Your Guests
No great hostess ever serves a dinner which appeals only to herself. She is considerate of her guests—she has dishes prepared which are especially pleasing to those to be entertained. Carrying that thought of consideration a step further it would not seem quite logical to have the rooms in which our guests assemble (living room, parlor, reception and dining rooms) filled with photographs, bric-a-brac, and other objects which are of interest only to members of our own family. Such objects belong in the upper halls and bedrooms. Consideration for your guests demands that the rooms in which they assemble contain decorations of general interest, and it is a far-seeing hostess who surrounds herself with interesting objects picked up when she made her last trip to the shore—others purchased when she was in the mountain—others when she visited the coast or foreign country.

Appropriate Furniture
No one of refined taste would think of placing an extremely light, graceful piece of furniture near a heavy piece of furniture—one would appear clumsy—the other would appear frail. Think well over your selections of furniture. Be sure that they are not too heavy or too light for the pieces with which they are to be associated. That is one of the principal reasons why we have sets of so-called "period" furniture—because one piece balances the other—it is all in what the experts call the same "scale." The truly artistic person, however, can dispense with furniture which is all of the same period—his taste is so refined that his rooms will never be out of balance. There will never be too much furniture at one end and not enough at the other, and he would not think of violating the rule that all rugs be placed parallel to the walls.

Home Beautiful Week, in the last analysis, implies appropriateness. If we strive for the home beautiful we must arrange our rooms in a conventional yet comfortable manner. We should not have day beds in dining rooms. We should not have talking machines in reception rooms and nursery furniture in the parlor. There is a place for everything, and "everything in its place" is demanded in the beautiful home.

Most of us Americans are experts at developing our lawns. Most of us are experts at keeping our hedges trimmed in well regulated fashion. Most of us realize the necessity of the free use of paint on our outhouses and homes. The best week in the year in which to start rearranging our pictures, furniture and the color plan of our home is Home Beautiful Week.
