BIBLE THOUGHT AND PRAYER

Prepared by Radio BIBLE SERVICE Bureau, Cincinnati, Ohio. If parents will have their children memorize the daily Bible selections, it will prove a priceless heritage to them in after years.

THY KEEPER:—The Lord is thy keeper; the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand.—Psalm 121:5. PRAYER:—O Lord, Thou hast made us glad through Thy work; we will triumph in the works of Thy hands.

A BOOM THAT WILL JUSTIFY ITSELF

There is a boom in the filbert industry in the Salem district. It has persisted to the limit of the available suitable nursery stock for the past three or four years, and it will so continue for the coming planting season.

And it should. It is a boom that will justify itself. All the filberts produced commercially in the United States are grown in the Willamette valley, except those in Clarke county, Washington, which is practically a continuation of this valley.

Grown in what The Statesman is pleased to call the Salem district. The new plantings in this country are all in this district.

The expert in this line from the United States Department of Agriculture, visiting Salem last year, said we have the most promising filbert groves here to be found in the country.

Our filbert growers have been learning by experience and experimenting. Pollination is the big thing in filbert growing. This matter has resolved itself down to about the following:

Plant Barcelona filberts, with enough DuChilly trees to pollinate them, with enough Clackamas or Davidiana (or Daviana) to pollinate the DuChillys. There are some newer pollenizers that will no doubt be heard from in the future in the industry; when enough trees shall have been produced to make them generally available. All of the articles on the Slogan pages are worth reading; should be read and studied by those expecting to plant filberts.

The pioneers of the industry have blazed the way; have borne the brunt of expensive and time-killing experimentation. The new grower has the benefits of this work of the pioneers.

George A. Dorris of Springfield, who may be appropriately called the father of the filbert industry in this country, in an article a year ago, said:

"Filbert culture in Oregon has made such progress that it is no longer necessary to guess at what yields will be. The block of twenty-five Barcelonas I planted twenty-one years ago, some of them replants of probably not more than eight to ten years of age, has this year brought the average yield for three years to between thirty-four and thirty-five hundred pounds per acre. Eleven year old trees, this year yielded at the rate of about two thousand pounds per acre. With such yields, which are not excessive and can be easily counted on, there need be no doubt as to the profitability of the industry."

Read the above paragraph over a second time. Then you will not dispute the prediction that the filbert industry will be one of the most important of all our industries here in the Salem district. The filbert boom will and should persist.

The growing of filberts and walnuts in the Salem district is bound to bring up land values. For the purpose of cultivating these nut trees, hundreds of thousands of acres of our land is worth ten to twenty times the present selling prices—potentially worth such great advances in price.

If you live in some other district, or some other state or country, you can afford to give this matter consideration.

One thing more: The filbert tree never grows old. It renews itself every year, like the walnut tree. Filbert and walnut trees put out now, of the right varieties, with proper pollenizers, in the Salem district, will grow more fruitful and more valuable throughout all the years of your life, and the lives of your children and children's children, down through the unwinding years of the future.

A recent issue of the American Economist contains a reprint of a picture of "The Millionth Loaf." This was the millionth loaf of free trade bread distributed through its free bread fund by the New York World in 1894, as a direct result of the election of Grover Cleveland and his free trade Congress, which the World advocated. The same thing happened in the first two years of Wilson's administration, when there were again long bread lines in New York and other cities throughout the country. The World also advocated Wilson's election. And that newspaper is again advocating the election of a free trade President and a free trade Congress. And should that newspaper have its present wish, the same thing would be sure to happen—long bread lines would again form. But the World will not have its wish this time. Next Tuesday's election will give us a protectionist President and Congress, and there will be no bread lines. Twice in such a length of time is enough. We will have a period of the greatest growth and prosperity in the history of the country; in the history of the world.

AN OLD FRIEND GONE

We can recall in our youth the great shock it was to learn that Lydia M. Pinkham had been dead for many years. She had such a large reputation and her picture was so prominent that we always thought she must be one of the leading women of the nation.

We have just had another shock and that is to learn that Laura Jean Libbey has just died. We had always supposed that she was a contemporary of Lydia Pinkham, and in some way we had associated the two names together. Possibly because they were both for women—one to cure one kind of trouble, and the other another kind. A fair sample of Laura Jean's amorousness and versatility is found in the following extract from "Love's Young Dream."

"Again he caught her in his arms. 'I have told you so over and over again, darling, have I not?' he murmured, caressing the beau-

"Surely no man in the whole wide world is as happy as I, for I have won all that makes life worth the living—the love of the girl who is queen of my heart. Can I say more sweet? If I were to try forever to tell you how happy I am, I should not finish the story in long years to come. Yes, Irene, I am happy, happy; for ours is a marriage of true love; the uniting of hearts that heaven made for each other; the blending of two lives that never would have existed apart."

"Go on, my love, go on," she sobbed; "tell me more; tell me what you would do if anything should ever happen to—to tear us asunder." Laura Jean wrote love dreams and amorous copy. She wrote for the languishing, languorous social buds whose heart throbs were interrupted by tragedies very real to them but not quite so serious to those outside. In fact she was a specialist on what they call "call love." Some call it "puppy love." Most young girls have had it, and it was at that stage in their career that they swear by Laura Jean Libbey.

A RAILROAD CHANCE

The Howell-Barkley railroad labor bill was defeated at the last session of congress but was not killed. It will come up again. In this connection it will be interesting to note the analysis of Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, who compares it to the present board of nine. Mr. Donnelly also points out that his railroad has observed 98 per cent of the findings of the cases where it was interested. Mr. Donnelly points out that outside of the increased cost of the new plan with its 40 members, each with a salary of $7,000, and four secretaries at $4,000 each, estimated at $350,000 a year, as against about $95,000 for the present board, the failure of the measure to give the board real authority to prevent strikes is cited as a chief argument against it. One section of the bill says:

Nothing in this act shall be construed to require an individual employe or subordinate official to render labor or service without his consent, nor shall anything in this act be construed to make the quitting of his labor or service by an employe or subordinate official an illegal act.

The railroad officials construe this as an invitation to workers to disregard the board's orders by striking, although the law requires them to "faithfully execute" the award. This clause is properly held to be fraught with grave public danger.

Only nationally organized labor crafts may make nominations for memberships on the proposed national adjustment boards. Hundreds of employes, it is pointed out, would be left without representation.

WENT TO WORK

A good many people have wondered why A. E. Kerns quit running for state treasurer as a progressive. It was given out that he wanted to help La Follette. A circular which is before us at this time indicates that he was also somewhat interested in the state treasurer. He declares that the irreducible school fund is losing from three to five hundred thousand dollars under the administration of Tom Kay's bad loans. This is the wildest statement that has been made, and doubtless Kerns was released for the progressive party because he makes statements wilder than anybody else. Such things are reacting. Tom Kay is too good a business man to make bad loans intentionally, and the losses sustained by the school fund will be small in any event. Listen! The school fund will lose less than the difference between 4 1/2 per cent received on bonds and the 6 per cent the farmers are now paying. Think this over.

ECONOMIC QUACKS

Secretary Mellon very properly denounces that he proposed economic quacks for the elimination of our economic ills. These men are making specious statements based on wild theories unrecognized by any economic law in the world. They promise much because they do not have to deliver anything.

Another economic quack is the university professor who teaches his pupils specious but untrue doctrines. A good many colleges have tainted the students in this branch of education with heresy, but the students haven't been out in the world very long until they learn for themselves that their early teaching was wrong. This is why these teachings do not get any further than they do. They don't last when put under the acid test of practical experience.

MORE GOING FOR POLITICS

It has leaked out that there is a powerful secret organization attempting to line up candidates for congress and senators in favor of a change in the Volstead act. It is worthy of note, however, that not an Oregon republican candidate is given as sympathetic with the wet cause.

There will be no modification of the Volstead act. The next step will be to strengthen it. This can be done by better law enforcement and also by strengthening the law in its weaker places. Not only has prohibition come to stay in America, but world prohibition is before us.

COUNTY HEALTH

It is a fact that Marion county has an opportunity to attract attention all over the United States because of the health campaign to be put on. Our county court refused to take the responsibility of making an annual appropriation of $2400. The members did not believe the people were in favor of it. A referendum was taken and upon that referendum the people will pass next Tuesday. It is a matter of the greatest possible importance to Marion county to have a favorable vote on this. It means so much for our children, after all, our first duty is to our children.

DAVIS' CLAIMS

Candidate Davis is described as very confident, buoyantly confident, in fact, of his election. Just how much basis there is for the claim can be realized here when it is stated that Davis claims Oregon. He will do mighty well if he runs second here. The chances are that he will run third. His general claims of election are just about as sensible as what he claims here.

Maggie and Jiggs Enjoy the Water

Mere rain or sea water doesn't bother Maggie. Her real worry is just now over her latest victim in the person of "Rufe White" who will, if he can hold the pace, play Jiggs at the Grand tonight for the Salem Rebekah lodge benefit. In practice "Rufe" has evaded every thing Maggie has had to offer but his friends point out that when he puts on his false stomach and is weighted down by excess weight, he may be a fraction of an inch too slow and the show may end forthwith when Maggie connects with her 201 pound rolling pin.

The Rebekah committee are well satisfied with the advance sale of tickets and wish the public to know there are still some good reserved seats left with every prospect good for a full house when the curtain rises at 8:15 Thursday night.

Oil Tanker Afire Off Coast of California

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 29.—The tanker Alden Anderson, owned by the Associated Oil company was reported afire tonight at Avon, about 18 miles northeast of here, near where the company refinery is located. Early reports said 15 members of the crew had jumped overboard and that a number were unaccounted for. Details were lacking.

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR SKIN

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation. Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.—Adv.

WHAT HARVEY W. WILEY ACTUALLY WROTE When He Was Federal Pure Food Commissioner

By Harvey W. Wiley, M. D. Although wholesome fats and oils should not in justice be excluded from human foods, I have always taken the ground that they should never be permitted to masquerade under false forms or names. Butter, for example, is an excellent and legitimate product, which is entitled to its own place in the market, and should never have to meet the unfair competition of its so-called substitutes. This would seem elementary. And yet the law expressly permits the manufacturers of oleomargarine to imitate butter in odor and flavor. Fraud inevitably follows. And it will follow while the present law exists. Moreover, the defrauders are assured, that, even when they are detected they can escape punishment by paying a small part of their profit. Witness the recent compounding of oleomargarine frauds, whereby the treasury was cheated out of more than a million of revenue. The law which forbids the artificial coloring of oleomargarine is all right, but that does not strike at the root of the evil. The frauds in oleo thrive chiefly because it smells and tastes like butter. This can be remedied easily: Under a heavy penalty, forbid the use of butter, milk or cream in any form in the manufacture of oleomargarine. Relief will never be had until such a law is passed. Therefore, I ask the real dairyman, the man who feeds the cow and milks and churns, to join me in putting an end forever to "oleomargarine" frauds by demanding a law that will prohibit the use of any dairy product in any preparation of fat or oil intended for consumption in the place of butter. Every wholesome product should be equal before the law and have equal rights on the markets of the country. —Good Housekeeping.

VOTER! STOP; LOOK; AND THINK. Coconut Oil imported during first 7 months of this year (free of duty) 122,311,587 POUNDS Copra (is one-half oil) imported during first 7 months of this year (free of duty) 162,775,475 POUNDS. Enough Oil imported into the United States, free of duty, to take the place of over two hundred million (200,000,000) POUNDS OF BUTTERFAT What hope for the survival of the dairy industry with such competition? Coconut oil valued at 8 cents a pound. Butterfat, 40 cents a pound AND HERE IS THE JOKER. Oleomargarine sells at about 30 cents a pound and Butter at about 42 to 45 cents, retail

The opponents of the measure now before the voters of Oregon, namely the great meat packers and Standard Oil subsidiary organization, are using 2 1/2 per cent skimmed milk for counterfeiting purposes, in manufacturing oleomargarine. All the dairymen ask is to prohibit this practice. Wisconsin, the greatest dairying state of the Union, has such a law. No other state is as prosperous.

The opponents of the pending law are spending fortunes on newspaper publicity, pamphlets, sign boards and hired women and men canvassers in order to defeat the same. Are the voters of Oregon going to listen to and be influenced by such propaganda circulated and manipulated by interests who make and sell oleomargarine at from 100 per cent to 200 per cent profit, or will they protect Oregon's great industry, dairying,
