

DEANE AND DAWSON FIGHT DRAW IN 10-ROUND BATTLE HERE

BIG CROWD AT BOXING EVENT

Fans Receive Money's Worth at Armory Last Night; One Bout Is "Dud"

Boxing fans last night received a thrill when Sewell Deane of Salem and Charles Dawson, of Eugene, battled to a draw in 10 fast and furious rounds. Both men were experienced fighters, weighed 144 pounds each, and understood their business. For 30 minutes they performed. Both had wicked punches, but neither was able to land the sleeping punch. This was the first time in many months that a 10-round bout has been offered and Harry Plant, matchmaker, received many congratulations upon the staging of the card. A large crowd turned out, one of the best aggregation of fans in recent months. A feature of the program was an exhibition match between the young Fox brothers, of Independence, which terminated in a draw. Music by a band was another feature, music being offered between events.

Deane opened up in the first round and registered the first hit. Both showed their stuff but were wary, sizing up each other. Dawson fought an open style while Deane offered a peculiar crouch, drawing his head between his shoulders.

In the second round the action began, with Dawson swinging some violent uppercuts that failed to connect. Deane ducking each. Both men got under way by the third round while the next went to Dawson by a shade. Deane came back and mixed things, drawing credit for the period.

During the sixth round both exchanged some hard blows, first one appearing to take the round and then the other. Deane begged Dawson to open up and "come on" in the seventh, which was Deane's round. Deane appeared to have the edge in the next round while in the ninth he dropped Dawson to his knees with a solar plexus blow. If either had been able to connect in the tenth, the fight would have terminated abruptly. The decision of draw, given by two judges, was well received by the crowd, which was strong for the local fighter.

Three six-round events paved the way for the main event. In the first of these Lefty Warton, of Salem and R. E. Coates, of Dallas. The Dallas fighter opened with a rush and forced Lefty to his knees. In spite of pleas from the fans, he continued to take advantage of a count and continued the fight. Coates took the round by a wide margin. In the second round, seeing the hopelessness of the fight, Warton's seconds tossed a sponge into the ring to signify the finish. As far as they were concerned, and to spare their man, Spike Crossan, of Salem, stepped into the ring and challenged Coates for a later match. The two were evenly matched as to weight, each weighing about 141.

The only disappointing bout of the program was the second preliminary, when Kewpie Dayton, of Seattle, received a sudden attack of "leather fever" and upon getting close enough to smell a glove, passed away. At every swing, whether he was touched or not, Dayton fell upon his back when Young Dempsey, of Oregon City, made a pass in his direction. The fight was stopped in the first round. Fearing that Dayton might have had a heart attack, a physician was called to examine him, but found him physically in condition. It was announced that Dayton would not receive anything for his appearance. He was booed by the crowd as he left the ring. Both fighters weighed 126 pounds.

Wendle Ginther, 160, of Oregon City, annexed his 6-round fight with George Hennessey, of Camas, Wash., who weighed 145 pounds. Hennessey came to Salem upon three days' notice and recently had an attack of tonsillitis. He put up a game fight and was given a "big hand" by the fans as he left the ring upon being declared the loser. Both fighters were awkward in their movements. Hennessey was un-

HIGH SCHOOL HOOP PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Forty Aspirants Are Out for Squad; Four of Them Are Lettermen

Turnouts for the Salem high school basketball squad are very promising for this year. From among the 40 aspirants for basketball honors, four of them are lettermen. Those who are from last year are Ellis, Drager, Stanson and Ashby. Heenan, who was bruised badly during football season, will be out in suit soon, it is expected. Besides the lettermen Coach Hollis Huntington has many promising hunters and he expects to select a first string that will make things hum.

Games with Corvallis have been arranged, but the complete schedule will not be completed until after the Willamette Valley athletic conference on December 20. The Dallas fighter opened with a rush and forced Lefty to his knees. In spite of pleas from the fans, he continued to take advantage of a count and continued the fight. Coates took the round by a wide margin. In the second round, seeing the hopelessness of the fight, Warton's seconds tossed a sponge into the ring to signify the finish. As far as they were concerned, and to spare their man, Spike Crossan, of Salem, stepped into the ring and challenged Coates for a later match. The two were evenly matched as to weight, each weighing about 141.

able to stand the attack of the heavier man, but signified his willingness to meet Ginther in the future. Fans were satisfied with the judges' decision of a draw in the Bill Hunt-William Bennett 6-round match. Hunt is a husky Salem fireman while Bennett hales from Tillamook. Both weigh 185 pounds. Both fought even the first round, with Hunt having an edge in the second canto. The third was quiet but in the fourth Hunt landed a few good blows. Bennett came back and evened up the score, with about an even break in the final round. The rounds were of 2-minutes each.

In the first preliminary Art Mayer, of Salem, won on a technical knockout from Arthur Goldens, also of Salem. Both boys were snappy and mixed things to the satisfaction of all. Mayer was unable to deliver a knockout punch or floor his opponent, but the result was clear and the fight was stopped in the second round. Fighters had to do their own ring work, as neither referee appeared willing to step between the fighters and separate them in the clinches. Mareneau, manager of Cracker Warren, refereed all but the main event, which was refereed by Maddock. Bill Kilpatrick and Walt South were the judges.

Portland Football Winners to Play Eastern Champions

PORTLAND, Dec. 2.—Negotiations are in progress for a football game between the Lincoln high school team, champion of the Portland interscholastic league, and the Waite high school of Toledo, Ohio, December 13. The Toledo team has suggested that the game be played either Christmas or New Year's but Principal Norman C. Thorne of Lincoln high prefers an earlier game, believing it would be better patronized than a contest on either of the holidays.

THIS BEET BEATS ALL FOR ITS SIZE

One Like This Will Make a Lot of Good Feed for Well Bred Poultry

James Fry brought to Salem yesterday a beet over two feet long weighing seventeen and a half pounds. It is a stock beet, of the Gatepost variety. It was raised by Mr. Fry on his farm at Livestry station on the Oregon Electric. This was formerly the Marbach farm. The beet is on display at the seed store of D. A. White & Son.

The beet had no irrigation whatever, and no doubt Mr. Fry will beat this beet in normal years. He beat it in size in Somersetshire, England, where he formerly lived. Mr. Fry is giving special attention here to well bred poultry. He finds that these beets make good poultry feed.

He came from England twelve years ago, lived in Idaho seven years, and has been on his present farm five years. He expects to see a great growth in the poultry industry here. He believes this is the best poultry country in the world.
