BITS FOR BREAKFAST

There is money in mint—A mint of money with peppermint oil at its present prices, and with a normal crop in the Salem district.

How, for instance, would you like to have 100 acres of mint, producing 60 to 85 pounds of peppermint oil to the acre, and selling at $3.50 a pound the New York price of yesterday?

And you must remember that mint is as easy to raise as hay, and you extract the oil and still have the hay—as good hay as any; some growers say better than any.

Will you be surprised to see a big mint boom here? Ought to be. And Salem must have a peppermint oil refinery.

Now that the linen mill development is on the way, you need not be surprised to see it go very fast. There is a $100,000,000 annual industry just ahead of us; and a possibility of Salem being a city of 100,000 people, and then be only just started to growing.

The time of linen millionaires in Salem is on the way.

The most wonderful thing about the Salem district is the fact that nature has given our people so many franchises, or possible products that amount to franchises; things that we can produce of better quality or to better advantage or at greater profit than other districts. Mint growing is one of these franchises about which there can be no question or argument.

You will not get pinched if you build a mint distillery. There is no moonshine in peppermint oil. It does not take a bootlegger to sell it. The candy and gum men and druggists and manufacturers of toilet articles will take all we are likely to produce for a long time. Salem has all the makings of the mint center of the world. All on earth that is required is complete organization and cooperation. The rest will follow as the sparks fly upward.

The Need for Anticipatory Service

The best kind of service from the funeral director is that which is anticipatory—service that meets a wish, a need or a requirement before it really takes definite form.

It is such thoughtful, prepared service that we have learned to render. This kind of service, we believe, is most valuable.
