We talk about the hundreds of millions which express the value of Oregon crops. But the children are the most important crop we produce. Their value is above all else. Their health is of paramount significance to all that we hope for realization in years to come. The opportunity in Oregon for children to be red-lipped and pinkked, active, happy and strong, is unsurpassed. Oregon children who have all outdoors to play in are as much in contrast as possible with the pale and anemic little folks who make their shaded and ertain growth in the tenements and the crowded cities, Oregon children have the best chance for health, physical, mental,
