

The Father of the Christmas Seal

Christmas seal of 1924

Little Patients Taking the Sun-Cure for Tuberculosis at an American Sanatorium.

Einar Holboell, inventor of the Christmas Seal.

"I saw at once that the Christmas stamp ought to be sold at postoffices and should cost only a trifle, so that every one could afford to buy it. The well-to-do, who send many letters, would spend more money, but the poor could have the pleasure of helping, too."

"A committee of men of distinction was formed, and through their influence, I obtained the permission of the Ministry to sell the stamps at postoffices for the benefit of a fund to erect a hospital for tuberculous children. So a year after the idea came to me, the first tuberculous Christmas stamps were sold in 1904."

"The return far exceeded our expectations, totalling 70,000 Danish crowns, or about $10,000. Year by year the income has increased. Last year it was 217,000 crowns, and during the twenty years they have been sold, a total sum of 2,700,000 crowns has been realized."

"Our committee has erected a hospital accommodating 165 tuberculous children, and since it was opened, a total of 3,000 little girls and boys have gone to the institution at Kolding Fjord and been healed. We now have three homes for weak and undernourished children, and besides have contributed generously to societies which aim to help sick and poor children in various ways."

"The first sale in the United States was in 1907, when Miss Emily P. Bissell, of Wilmington, Delaware, adopted the idea to raise funds to maintain a tuberculosis shack of eight beds on the banks of the Brandywine, securing $3,000. She in turn, had read a magazine article by the great philanthropist, Jacob A. Riis, describing the Danish tuberculosis stamp he had received on the back of a letter from the city of his birth—Copenhagen."

"Miss Bissell next aspired to extend the work by a national campaign, and interested the American Red Cross. The first national Christmas Seal sale occurred in 1908, and brought in $135,000. Each year since the sum has increased just as it has in Denmark."

"Einar Holboell, the inventor of the Christmas Seal, could not possibly have foreseen its magic health value today, not only in raising funds to continue the work, but in carrying to millions of people every holiday season the stimulus to guard against disease. These tiny pieces of paper, multiplied a billion fold, have had an inestimable part in teaching the public that tuberculosis can be prevented—can be cured. The double-barred cross which each one bears is the emblem of the anti-tuberculosis work throughout the world."

"The Christmas seal has carried to the farthestmost parts of America the news that people need not die from tuberculosis. During the period the seal has been in existence, the death rate in this country from the disease has fallen from 198 per hundred thousand population to 95, a saving of over 100,000 lives this year."

"Who would have guessed that Mr. Holboell's little penny Christmas Seal could grow to be so big?"

combined the Delta Phi emblems and blossoms.

At the Beta Chi house which received from 8 to 9:30 o'clock Miss Eva Tacheron opened the door. The guests were introduced to the receiving line which included: Miss Dorothy Owen, Mrs. Alice H. Dodd, Miss Frances M. Richards, and Paul Wallace, by Miss Verna McKeenan. In the first living room a color scheme of blue and gold was used, while autumn tones predominated in the second living room. Miss Margaret Legge and Miss Frances Hodge presided at the punch bowls, with Miss Margaret Raught, Miss Kathryn Rossmann, Miss Lois Taylor, and Miss Cleo Weddle assisting in the serving. Miss Carol Cheney and Miss Helen Gatke were alumnae members of the sorority present for the evening. Josephine and Beatrice Evans presented each guest with a dewy bunch of real violets as a favor from the sorority.

Calling hours at the Alpha Phi Alpha house were from 9 to 10:30 o'clock. The guests were greeted at the door by Miss Marian Wyatt. Miss Ann Silver introduced to the receiving line. Those in the line were: Miss Edna Schrieber, Mrs. Hattie Durkheimer, Dean and Mrs. George H. Alden, Professor and Mrs. E. C. Richards, Miss Juanita Henry, Miss Elaine Clower, Miss Volena Jenks, and Miss Esther Moyer. Yellow chrysanthemums were used throughout in the decorating. Presiding at the punch bowls were Miss Hazel Malmsten and Miss Nora Pehrsson. The juniors of the sorority served, while the sophomore members of the house assisted in the rooms. Piano numbers were given during the evening by Miss Eugenia Savage and Miss Ethel Marks. Miss Alberta Koontz presented the house favors of the evening which combined mistle-toe sprigs with the house emblems.
