

The Oregon Statesman

Issued Daily Except Monday by THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING COMPANY 215 South Commercial St., Salem, Oregon

J. J. Hendricks, Editor; John L. Brady, Editor; Frank Jackson, Editor; Manager Job Dyck

MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Business Office: Thomas F. Clark Co., New York, 141-145 West 36th St., Chicago, Marquette Building, W. S. Grohmann, Mgr. (Portland Office, 226 Worcester Bldg., Phone 5537 Broadway, C. F. Williams, Mgr.)

Telephone: 23-106, 23-108, 23-109, 23-110, 23-111, 23-112, 23-113, 23-114, 23-115, 23-116, 23-117, 23-118, 23-119, 23-120, 23-121, 23-122, 23-123, 23-124, 23-125, 23-126, 23-127, 23-128, 23-129, 23-130, 23-131, 23-132, 23-133, 23-134, 23-135, 23-136, 23-137, 23-138, 23-139, 23-140, 23-141, 23-142, 23-143, 23-144, 23-145, 23-146, 23-147, 23-148, 23-149, 23-150, 23-151, 23-152, 23-153, 23-154, 23-155, 23-156, 23-157, 23-158, 23-159, 23-160, 23-161, 23-162, 23-163, 23-164, 23-165, 23-166, 23-167, 23-168, 23-169, 23-170, 23-171, 23-172, 23-173, 23-174, 23-175, 23-176, 23-177, 23-178, 23-179, 23-180, 23-181, 23-182, 23-183, 23-184, 23-185, 23-186, 23-187, 23-188, 23-189, 23-190, 23-191, 23-192, 23-193, 23-194, 23-195, 23-196, 23-197, 23-198, 23-199, 23-200

Entered at the Postoffice in Salem, Oregon, as second-class matter

BIBLE THOUGHT AND PRAYER

Prepared by Radio BIBLE SERVICE Bureau, Cincinnati, Ohio. If parents will have their children memorize the daily Bible verses shown, it will prove a priceless help to them in after years.

GLADNESS IN SERVICE:—Serve the Lord with gladness. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name. For the Lord is good. Psalm 100:2, 4, 5.

LOGANBERRIES TO CURE GOITER

There is an article of Dr. Woods Hutchinson in the Saturday Evening Post of this week that will attract attention among the loganberry growers of the Salem district—

For it shows that loganberries carry the highest iodine content of any human food; carries 165 parts per million of iodine—

And medical science has found that iodine is necessary in curing and preventing goiter.

There is reference in the news columns this morning to this illuminating article of Dr. Hutchinson, who was at one time a citizen of Oregon, and who has become the world's best known writer on health and medical subjects for popular reading. This is true in that he both knows his subjects and understands how to put the information into language that ordinary people can understand; with illustrations and comparisons that make them most interesting reading.

It will be reflected by many readers of this article that it is a pity the fact of the high iodine content of loganberries could not have been discovered several years ago—

In time to give a value to loganberry and loganberry juice advertising that nothing else could possibly give. But it is not too late yet.

Here is a chance to put loganberries over; to give new life to the loganberry industry.

In all the great valleys between the Rockies and the Allegheny mountains, teeming with population, there is a shortage of iodine. That region is too far from the salt water sprays from the ocean to give its fruits and vegetables, and its animals feeding on its grasses, any trace of iodine, so necessary in the human dietary to prevent goiter. And this is true of all the other regions of the world similarly situated; more than 50 to 200 miles from the ocean.

The right man, with a vision plus organizing ability, or the right group of capitalists with a vision, could put loganberries and loganberry juice on the commercial map of the world, and keep them there—

With a stressing of the high iodine content of this great bush fruit. As "good wine needs no bush," so loganberries do not need iodine to make them the most popular berry in the world. They have in them qualities of excellence that, if generally known, would make them go without reference to this peculiarity which they possess—

But plus their iodine content they could be put over in a very large way—

And there would not again be complaint in the Salem district of a slump in the loganberry market.

The location of the Miles linen mill in the northern part of the city, bordering on the Pacific highway, the Tile road and the Southern Pacific line, will give renewed activity to that part of the city, already enjoying a mild boom; to say nothing of every other part of the city. The extension of Seventeenth street, advocated by Mayor Giesy in his annual message delivered last night, would also help the activities out that way. There was already a rumor of a bank, or a branch of one of the down town banks, being established in that section. There are also being planned the building of residences out that way in large numbers. If all the projects on the tapis shall be consummated, Salem will before long be building not about one new house a day, week days, as in 1924, but a house and a half a day soon, and before long running up to two a day, including Sundays.

and our best officials come from the people, from the ranks of those who understand what it is the people want and should have. Mr. Mills is very far fetched when he wants an aristocracy of office holders rather than a democracy.

A CURE

So many fake cures have been given to the public that they must be excused from being a bit credulous about one just announced for incipient tuberculosis. This is such a terrible disease that every fake remedy has had a large sale and millions have been squandered in fruitless attempts to master it.

Recently we have been making marvelous strides forward by treatment rather than by medicine. Last October at the American Medical society meeting at Columbus, a Norwegian doctor announced a cure that is an extract of gold. The alleged cures had been extracting gold from the pockets of the people for many years but this is one that is genuine. An eminent Chicago physician was appointed to go to Copenhagen and investigate it first hand. He has just made a report in which he says that the half has never yet been told. He has come back an enthusiast for the new cure and says that at last we have mastered this terrible disease. Sufferers all over the world will be glad of this. It is not a patent nostrum. It is something that is given to the world and all the doctors will soon be using it.

Having found a cure for tuberculosis, the world will not be content but will be asking more and more of the medical profession. It will want a cure for cancer—that disease of death.

THE NEW TREASURER

Thomas B. Kay who was yesterday installed as state treasurer for the second time, is a man who needs no introduction to the people of Oregon. He was elected on his record. He has served in the position of state treasurer but in addition to being state treasurer, he has always been a distinguished citizen. It didn't take a state office to make him useful and when the republicans were looking around for a man to run, they naturally turned towards Tom Kay because he was an outstanding Oregonian. Mr. Kay's election followed and he has again been inducted into office. He is in no sense a sky rocket man. He does not believe in spectacular things. He is a hard headed business man who believes the state should be run as a private business. He has made a success in private business and heretofore he has made a success in public life and this time he will not disappoint the confidence of those who voted for him last November.

JEFFERSON MYERS

One of the most pleasant and agreeable men which the state capitol has brought to Salem has been Jefferson Myers who retired from the office of state treasurer yesterday. Mr. Myers made a good official. He served the people to the best of his ability. From the day he went in to the day he came out, he was intent upon doing his full duty and the short time he was in, he made a record worth while. The fortunes of politics did not permit him to continue in office but he retains the respect of his friends and is known to the people of Oregon as an outstanding one hundred per cent Oregonian.

A COLLEGE EDUCATION

It is true that college educations are easily secured in these days. It used to be hard. Nicholas Butler who happens to be the head of a great institution believes that education is too easy. He considers this an offense. Butler is a good deal of an ass. However a good many people are seriously questioning whether or not higher education should be for everybody. Has the world gained anything by Butler himself being educated? Serious-minded educators and parental observers are wondering if a costly educational mistake has not been made in the forced growth of the country's colleges and universities. They wonder if scholarship, serious purpose and strong character have not been submerged in sheer numbers of students, the mass of them bent on frivolity and mentally incapable of absorbing higher education beneficially. More and more these create the "atmosphere" of the big universities and set the styles and standards rather than the faculty. They make the institution what it is.

ECONOMIC CONFERENCE AND DISARMAMENT

Senator Borah wants an economic conference and President Coolidge wants disarmament. Both are right and they must go together in order for either to be worth anything. There is no use talking of putting the world on its feet until we have solved our economic problems if we are going to continue to have feverish rivalry over the size of our armaments. Instead of being antagonistic the two plans should go hand in hand. They belong together; they are together spiritually, and they should be together materially. The world must get on its feet and the readjustment that puts it on its feet must carry with it a substantial reduction in the preparation for war.

THOSE WILD HORSES

You perhaps have been reading how hundreds of wild horses have been coming into the yards in eastern Oregon and have had to be shot in many instances because they could not be driven away. Something must be done to reach those horses. They are entitled to enough to eat. They are entitled to be driven to food.

Down in Arizona thousands of deer were being driven to pasture, but a terrific snow storm came up and pell-mell the west back to death. It isn't fair, it isn't exercising the guardianship that man, the superior, has over the inferior animals. Our responsibility to these animals can not be evaded, and in our comfortable homes we must remember them and care for them.

PLAYING SHAKESPEARE

The Oregon Statesman desires to depart from a long established custom and editorially give its endorsement to a play to be presented at the Grand theater the present week. Fritz Leiber will play "Macbeth" here on Thursday night. He has been playing in Portland, and if you read the Portland papers you will see what a wonderful hit he has made.

Mr. Leiber has an entirely new interpretation of Shakespeare. He has done away with the stilted, stiff, staking around the stage, and acts naturally. Wherever he goes he is making a big hit.

Listen! Salem has been wanting the best. Many people here want the best. They are entitled to the best. The only way they can continue to get the best is by patronizing things that are truly worthwhile.

THE PRESIDENT IS RIGHT

President Coolidge is absolutely right in insisting that the cart should not be put before the horse in the question of postal salaries. He vetoed the bill last fall because it made no provision to raise the money.

Certain senators who think it smart want to pass the bill over his veto. It is believed that a number of senators will see the undesirability of this and stand by the president. There is no attempt to prevent a proper adjustment of salaries in the post office department. What is wanted is to get the revenue provided for before the bill is passed. This is fair alike to the postal employees and to the government.

The Oregon City Enterprise showed unusual enterprise in having a four page advertisement in its Sunday issue. That is going some for a town of that size.

The Gazette-Times of Corvallis had an unusually interesting New Years edition. The editorial page was the finest we have seen in Oregon.

The joke is on Claude Ingalls of the Corvallis Gazette-Times. He takes Dr. Slaughter seriously.

JUSTICE COURT JURY LIST OUT

Names of 50 Prospective Jurors are Announced By Local Justice

Names of 50 citizens have been drawn for jury duty in the justice court. All of them are men. Citizens whose names are on the panel are as follows: F. P. Smith, A. N. Moores, P. L. Frazier, A. J. Vick, C. G. Schramm, S. J. Hofma, Leo N. Childs, Charles Elgin, W. F. Fargo, George Thomason, H. S. Poisal, J. W. Carson, A. M. Clough, Earl Race, G. W. Laffar, J. W. Herritt, D. A. White, E. A. Bennett, H. H. Boxrud, S. S. East, A. P. Van Slyke, A. J. Barham, A. J. Basey, C. A. Clark, Frank D. Bowman, E. T. Barnes, Abner Lewis, C. H. Fake, J. W. Bellamy, Joe Thiel, J. H. Baker, R. N. Hooper, S. P. Kimball, W. J. Linfoot, H. L. Marsters, Gerald Volk, J. E. Petty-crow, W. C. Miller, T. W. Davies, H. P. Stith, Z. J. Biggs, W. E. Tomlinson, Joe Baumgartner, A. R. Looney, Barney Wright, Aliver Bears, F. L. Scott, D. D. Soclofsky.

We got some underwear for Christmas. It was timely. Our bathing suit was just about worn out.

PILES

CURED WITHOUT SURGERY

MY METHOD of treating Piles, recognized as so successful, is non-surgical. No inconveniences, embarrassments or confinement during treatment. One may come and go about his duties as usual. Relief is apparent from the very first, and I positively GUARANTEE to cure any case of Piles or refund the patient's fee.

If you will write to me I will send you my FREE book on Piles and other Rectal and Colon diseases.

DEAN, M.D., INC.

Portland, Oregon

573 BROADWAY, 5TH AND 6TH STS.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

Copyright by Newspaper Feature Service

CHAPTER 351.

WHAT DICKY'S TELEGRAM CAUSED MADGE TO DO.

Lillian's little exhortation, which, despite her reference to my gameness, held a tiny edging doubt of my poise, spurred my numbed faculties as I mechanically obeyed her and read the telegram whose opening words had so frightened me.

It was dated the night before from Caldwell, N. Y., a place of which I never had heard.

"Come at once," it said. "Disregard all newspaper stories; can explain fully. Am in awful embarrassing mess through no fault of anybody except busybodies. Miss Foster needs you badly. I need you more. Be a good sport, sweetheart, and hurry up here."

"Lillian! Those Newspapers!"

There followed the letters of a foolish little code love message which Dicky used over the telephone in the hectic days of our courtship. It is an obligation of honor with us that when either recites that to the other, forgiveness must follow. Then there came minute directions for reaching Caldwell, and Dicky's signature.

I am not quite sure of my first reactions to this astonishing telegram. I know that for a time, which seemed endless, I read and re-read the appeal my husband had sent me, but with eyes that saw nothing. There was no sound from Lillian—and when my own voice, hoarse and querulous, finally broke the silence, started like a spurred horse.

"Caldwin," I said abruptly. "I never heard of Caldwell."

"It's up in the district between the Catskills and the Adirondacks, Lillian replied, and her voice was as calm and matter-of-fact, as if we had been planning an ordinary week-end trip. "It's a long day's journey from here, however."

"It will be no day's journey for me!" I stormed, all my outraged sensibilities breaking at once into frenzy. "I'm not going one step up there. I don't care what happens. He can just get himself and Miss Foster out of any scrape he's gotten into. And I don't ever—ever want to hear his name again!"

I sprang from my seat, rushed to the window and pulled the like, as I gazed down into the garish flimsy drapery bed of me ostrich with the hot, bitter tears I did not den with unseeing eyes, blinded with Lillian to see.

The door closed softly, and I knew that Lillian had left the room. With a sudden recollection, I dashed the tears from my eyes, rushed to the door, threw it open, and called preemptorily: "Lillian! Those newspapers."

She was but a few steps from the door. She evidently had not planned to go very far from me, and her answer was as prompt as if she had expected the question. "I'll get them at once," she said, moving down the hall.

Madge's Indecision.

"Bring them to my room," I called softly after her, then picking up the telegram which I had crumpled and flung to the floor, I crossed the hall to my own room, and spread the rumpled sheets out again, noticing the minute directions Dicky had given for the journey he wished me to take.

One part of my brain was in hot rebellion, the other was coolly, methodically estimating the task which lay before me if I decided to grant Dicky's request. I took a local time-table from my desk and compared it methodically with the directions my husband had sent me. The first train by means of which I could make connections with the train for Caldwell would leave Bridgehampton in four hours, and I would be compelled to spend part of the night in a sleeping car.

The wages of my anger and humiliation which had receded a bit rolled high again, and broke over me.

"I will not go!"

I spoke the words aloud over and over again, but even as I said them I found myself going swiftly from the closet to dresser drawers, and putting into a bag the things I would need for a short stay in a strange place. It was as if something outside my own volition was driving me to a course of conduct which I neither desired nor approved.

Lillian's footsteps outside the door brought my activities to a sudden stop. I thrust the bag behind the bed, closed the dresser, and as she came in I faced her.

The Fun Shop

MAXSON FOXHALL JUDELL

in years gone by, I've always made a lot of resolutions staid; I've sworn off smoking cigarettes, from saying "Damn!" and making bets.

But hardly would the day go by. But I'd be told by some smart guy, "You can't; I'll bet a pair of shoes."

And I would say: "You're on!"—and lose.

Someone would step upon my corn, and I'd say: "Damn!" with face forlorn;

And after dinner I'd forget And light and puff a cigarette.

I find that one must concentrate To change a habit for a trait; So lest I overlook my brain, I never will resolve again.

Hard Luck Smith: "I heard of your son's breakdown at college. Is the condition serious?"

Jones: "Yes, it's the rear axle." —H. S. Fuchs.

Nice Girl, Catharine! Millicent: "Are sables much worn abroad this season, Catharine?"

Catharine: "I didn't see any as much worn as yours, dear!" —Edward W. Barnard.

Out of the Mouths of Babies— I was trying to teach my little girl the benefits derived from cleanliness, and asked: "Elsie, dear, why must we always be careful to keep our homes clean and neat?"

"Because company may walk in at any moment," was her reply. —Mrs. C. W. Diehl.

WALLY THE MYSTIC He'll Answer Your Questions, Somehow

A Happy New Year, one and all! If any problems fret or gail Just write. Let me make the new year.

Twelve months chock full of mirth and cheer.

A Special Case Dear Wally: When New Year comes in With all the whistles, bells, and din, My sweetie says he gets a kiss. What say you?

VERY PROPER MISS. Dear Very Proper Miss: My dear, This New Year comes but once a year!

So, while the atmosphere is stirred By whistles, kisses can't be heard.

A Precarious Resolution Dear Wally: I have just about Decided to cut fellows out. That resolution I will take On New Year's.

Yours, DISGUSTED KATE.

My Dear Disgusted Kate: All right! But when you two make up your fight Remember, men almost break The resolutions girls make.

What a Pity! Visitor at Insane Asylum: "You say that that man used to be president of a bank?"

Warden: "Yes." Visitor: "Drink?"

Warden: "No. Cross word puzzles." —Harold Myrning.

Oh Death, Where is Thy Sting! Mark: "Horriense never gets tired of telling how she got over her operation."

feeling much as might a child already beaten thoroughly, who sees another whipping in sight. (To be continued.)

jump from the pile of smoking ruins after the fire to the way things are to be seen there now.

The new blow pipe, to convey the shives and dust to the boiler room, takes thirty horse power. That would cost a considerable monthly sum if the power had to be bought. As it is, it will cost only the price of the oil for the new water wheel and dynamo.

The Oregon Cooperative Mint Growers association will hold its annual meeting on Saturday next, January 10, at 11 o'clock, at the Salem Chamber of Commerce. Notice has been sent to all members urging them to be present, and to bring along friends and neighbors who may be interested in the growing of mint. As the price of peppermint oil is high now, and there is a boom on in mint growing, it is expected that there will be a large number of growers at this meeting.

The company that was to have built a paper mill in the city limits of Portland, to manufacture kraft papers, mostly from sawmill refuse, and which could not go ahead with its plans on account of the objection of residents in the neighborhood of the proposed site, has been reorganized, to build at St. Helens, Columbia county, below Portland. Joe Kaeter, formerly superintendent of the Salem paper mill, is to have charge of the proposed new mill. The company that has been incorporated to build the mill at St. Helens is to have a million and a half dollars capital. Stock sales are now being made, and Salem people are being solicited to take stock.

Have a good time when you are young so that when you are old you will be sorry you did instead of sorry you didn't.

New way to kill scarlet fever germs is found. Better than painting one red, white and blue so they will cheer themselves to death.

FUTURE DATES

January 4, Sunday—YMCA group conference.

January 6, Tuesday—Coronation of King Ring of Cherries and installation of other officers.

January 12, Monday—Opening of 1925 legislature.

February 7, Saturday—Debate, Williamsite university vs. University of West Virginia.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Watch North Salem grow—

They get the linen mill in their section, and they are preparing to make things move out that way.

Mayor Giesy marks out an ambitious program in his annual message. The municipal government is not to lag behind in development projects to keep Salem on the map of progress. If all the things the mayor advocates can be put over in his second term, he will have left a wonderful impress upon the growth of Salem.

The scutching mill at the penitentiary will be going fully equipped from today on. It is a long

For Railroad information 41 or 80

SOUTHERN PACIFIC CITY OFFICE 104 1/2 BAY ST. S. F. STATION 12TH AND OAK

Children Cry for

Fletcher's CASTORIA

MOTHER!—Fletcher's Castoria is especially prepared to relieve infants in arms and children all ages of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and, by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving natural sleep.

To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Dr. H. C. Fletcher. Absolutely Harmless—No Opium. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

Blanks That Are Legal

We carry in stock over 115 legal blanks suited to most any business transactions. We may have just the form you are looking for at a big saving as compared to made to order forms.

Some of the forms: Contract of Sale, Road Notice, Will forms, Assignment of Mortgage, Mortgage forms, Quit Claim Deeds, Abstracts form, Bill of Sale, Building Contract, Promissory Notes, Installment Notes, General Lease, Power of Attorney, Prune Books and Pads, Scale Receipts, Etc. These forms are carefully prepared for the courts and private use. Price on forms ranges from 4 cents to 16 cents apiece, and on note books from 25 to 50 cents.

PRINTED AND FOR SALE BY

The Statesman Publishing Co.

LEGAL BLANK HEADQUARTERS

At Business Office, Ground Floor