

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

CHAPTER 352 WHY DICKY WAS FORCED TO TELEGRAPH FOR MADGE

I fairly snatched the newspapers from Lillian's hands and fumbled them over without finding the thing that I sought. Lillian took one of them from me, opened it, folded it to a certain column, and handed it back to me.

"This is the worst one," she said quietly. "Better get it over." I took it from her, and saw starting out at me the pictures of Dicky and Claire Foster—he in the uniform of an aviation officer. It was a photograph of Dicky which every newspaper in the country had had in its "morgue" since the World war from which he came back an ace.

The picture of Miss Foster was patently a snapshot, and I surmised that it had been obtained perhaps surreptitiously from some acquaintance of the girl's at her city address.

The captions beneath the photographs were not calculated to soothe my resentment. "World-famous American ace, Dicky Graham, and beautiful Claire Foster, the companion of his latest ascent, the most romantic, if not the most thrilling of his spectacular record."

I turned to the accompanying story, ignoring the flaming headlines, saw that the date line was Caldwell, and read the flippant, sensational account of the adventure behind my husband's frantic appeal to me to come to him.

"Dicky" Graham, who has faced a boche air rival, and an infuriated art editor and with equal aplomb, ruefully acknowledges today that for unpleasant ferocity either is backed up the boards by the redoubtable female whom our grandfathers knew as Madame Grundy.

It is admitted that the day has entirely disappeared from urban circles, and that city dwellers, especially the ultra-modern young women, do exactly as they please, but the old girl is still firmly planted in country circles, and nowhere does she thrive more than in the little summer resort

"Queen of the Forest" at Her Tractor, Busy with Cultivating 600,000 Trees for Lumber Purposes

Miss Evelyn W. Smith directs the work of 100 men in her reforestation undertaking at Amawalk, N. Y., where 600,000 knights of the forest are being cultivated. She is the first woman in the world to undertake such a project.

of Windy Caves, eighteen miles from here.

"Mr. Graham has won fame in two directions. He is one of our most brilliant younger illustrators and during the recent war he was an American ace whose exploits were widely heralded. So spoiled a darling of fortune, no doubt felt that it was no ones business if he took a daily flight in a friend's airplane with the prettiest girl at the Windy Caves resort as his companion. So every day for the past week the rocking chair brigade of the autumn colony has watched Miss Claire Foster, a beautiful wealthy and ultra-modern western guest of the Windy Cave House, attired in the latest flying outfit, trip blithely to the big, open field near the village, and wait for the dashing Dicky Lochinvar-like to appear from out of the west.

"What Will His Wife Say?" "Speculation ran high over the identity of the gallant flyer, for Miss Foster, insouciant but inscrutable, did not deign any information upon the subject nearest the hearts of the veranda knitters. But day before yesterday something went wrong with the airplane. Perhaps Dicky's attention was distracted from his controls, and, who could blame him. At any rate, there was an unexpected nose dive, a forced landing in a swamp, and a perilous and most uncomfortable tramp back to civilization for the unlucky aviator and his companion.

"Drenched, bruised and exhausted, they reached Windy Cave yesterday morning after twenty-four hours of wandering, and the rocking chair brigade learned the identity of Mr. Graham, and remembered at the same moment that the gallant Dicky has a charming wife and a cherubic small son out on Long Island. Everybody remembers the kidnapping of the Graham baby, and his subsequent recovery, with the newspaper furor it entailed, and with that topic and the disaster before them, the verandas at Windy Cave are humming like the nests of angry and censorious hornets."

"Miss Foster has been confined to her room since her return, and has refused any statement to reporters. Dicky grieved the sensitive souls of the newspaper contingent by requesting their departure at once to a place of perpetual summer heat. And the veranda brigade have just one question which they are broadcasting through the ether: "What will his wife say?"

"And if there is anybody who doubts the continuing existence of mid-Victorian Madame Grundy, let him come to Windy Cave."

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Clifford have just returned from Corvallis where Mr. Clifford gave a talk before the weekly Forum on methods of simplifying the calendar.

This subject is timely because the annual meeting of the American Association for Advancement of Science, sitting now in Washington, D. C., has just adopted resolutions favoring it. During the past few years several organizations of business men have been formed at different places in this country advocating simplification of the calendar.

Abroad the subject has been much discussed. An international commission with official representatives from various governments has been considering such projects for a number of years at Geneva, Switzerland. The League of Nations has recently given official sanction to revision of the calendar by appointment of a committee to consider it.
