FIELD SECRETARY IS NOW IN SALEM

Dr. Tufts Finds Popularity of Willamette Growing in Wide Territory

The field secretary of Willamette university, Dr. G. L. Tufts is now in the city looking after the interests of the institution. He has headquarters at both Portland and Salem. The work of Rev. J. E. Purdy has been turned over to Dr. Tufts, who is now in charge of the field work for the entire state.

The popularity of Willamette is growing throughout Oregon and the surrounding states, says the field secretary. The school has the highest enrollment of its history. The urgent need is for more buildings and a larger faculty. The million dollar endowment fund will yield about $60,000 annual income. This money and much more will be spent here at Salem. Dr. Tufts will call on those who are in arrears on their pledges to the Forward Movement "with united effort," says he, "the university and the city should make a forward stride. Let all put their shoulders to the wheel and their hands in their pockets and resolve on success."

Common labor topped the list with 67 applying for work and demands for 18. Twenty-one woods laborers called, with seven placed, and of the 13 farm hands only three found work. Other occupations represented, for which there was no demand, were agricultural laborers, 7; bakery worker, 1; cooks and chefs, 3; salespeople, 3; chauffeurs or truck drivers, 3; millwrights and pulp and paper-mill workers, one each. Of the 22 women registering for work, seven were in demand, referred, and five placed.

Weeks Named Director—L. E. Weeks, poultryman, was nominated a director of the Marion County Pacific Cooperative Poultry Producers' association, to succeed A. L. Lidbeck, last night. The organization also went on record as favoring the proper legislation for the establishment of a poultry veterinarian, because the business has become to be on a par with dairying, fruit growing and other interests of the state. A committee of three was appointed to carry out the resolution so that proper legislation could be made. L. E. Weeks, Lloyd A. Lee and P. F. Stokhise were selected. The poultrymen did not approve of the reduction in the number of directors from 13 to 9 as suggested at a previous meeting.

Birth Reports Filed—The birth certificates for two girls and one boy were filed with the city health officer yesterday. They were for the birth of a baby son to Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Melvin Shrock of 1407 North Winter. The report was dated December 13. A baby daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Almont C. SALEM—EUGENE

Parrish Paragraphs
By ROSE FOLGER

The beginning of the new semester will increase the enrollment of our school. Of the eight hundred eighty-three students now attending, about sixty will graduate, and one hundred seventh grade students are expected to enroll.

Fritz Leiber's performance of "Macbeth" was shown great interest by the English classes. While "Macbeth" is not studied in junior high school, several of Shakespeare's plays are included in the course and a number of students were able to attend the local performance.

Book reports are occupying time and attention of many English students as the close of the semester approaches. At least one book must be read by each student during the semester. In some classes two are required.

Dean Zietle, of the department of pharmacy of OAC, was in Salem yesterday to attend a meeting of the peppermint growers of this district.

The library of the school is enlarged, more reading can be required. At present, the reading lists have had to be lengthened in order to accommodate the large number of students in each grade. The interest shown in reading justifies a much larger library, which is the object and aim of the English department.

Our basketball team defeated the McKinley team Wednesday evening. But the losers did their best to keep us from it. Lee Becker was the high man and made about one-half of our points.
