FIERY, ITCHY SKIN QUICKLY SOOTHED WITH SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.—Adv.

CHAPTER 368

The Way Madge Strove to Avoid Harry Underwood

Only the consciousness that somewhere behind me were the watchful eyes of the three reporters, kept me from a violent start as I caught sight of the tall man who at my approach had suddenly turned away from the head of the stairway and melted into the crowd.

For I instantly had recognized the disguise with which the tall man was invested, and knew at once the identity of the man sporting the white military mustachios and closely-trimmed white beard of an elderly foreigner, and wearing the faultlessly tailored but foreign-looking clothing. Harry Underwood again appeared upon my horizon. And with the knowledge of the watchful eyes behind me, there was no other person of my acquaintance whom I more dreaded to meet. With him in my vicinity, I felt as if I were holding a can of explosives in one hand and a lighted match in the other.

That he had been watching for my appearance at the head of the waiting-room stairway I was sure, and I did not need to exercise my mental powers very greatly to deduce the reason for his being there. He had told me that he kept close track of my doings and Dicky's, and he must have read the account of Dicky's escapade in the morning newspapers, and decided that I would take the first train available.

His quick avoidance of me meant only a respite. Harry Underwood can do nothing except with a dramatic flourish. I was not only sure that he would join me at some stage of my journey, but that he would endeavor to provide a setting for his appearance which should breathe mystery and melodrama.

A Sudden Inspiration.

If I could only elude him and the reporters at the same time! I clicked my teeth angrily at the remembrance that my inexperience in city driving had prevented me from making the entire journey by motor, and I mentally resolved that before many weeks had passed I would be able to take my car anywhere. But that resolve did not help me now, and as I walked slowly across the space devoted to hurrying commuters coming and going, I tried to think of some feasible plan.

And then, with a sudden inspiration I wheeled and hurried toward the stairway which leads up from the Long Island station to the taxi entrance. I was tempted to step into a taxi there and be taken directly to the ferry, but I had a psychic little feeling that somewhere behind me Harry Underwood's keen eyes were watching me, and I dodged between taxis across the driveway into the big open space of the Pennsylvania station. I had remembered that from the corridor of the lavatories beneath the women's waiting-room there is a door leading into the labyrinth of stairways and passages. By these I might reach the Eighth avenue side of the big building, and with good luck get a taxi unobserved.

"Well Played, Lady Fair!"

Trying to keep my gait a moderate one so that I might not be conspicuous by my haste; I walked through the concourse and the waiting-room and down the steps into the lavatory corridor, and thence up the stairs to the Eighth Avenue entrance. But there was no empty taxi to be seen, and I realized that I must walk to the corner before getting one.

I cast an apprehensive glance round me, was reassured by seeing no familiar face, and made my way to the corner, where I was instantly accosted by the chorus:

"Taxi, lady? Taxi?"

I selected the man nearest me, and waited until I was in the cab before I gave him the direction. Then in a low tone I told him to take me to the ferry and to hurry. I knew that I could have made much better time to the Jersey terminus of my train by taking the tubes, but I already had decided to wait for a later train to Caldwin or to find some other route to the village than the direct one which I was sure the reporters meant to take.

At the ferry entrance I paid and dismissed the taxi man, walked into the big building and secured my ticket just in time for the opening of the gates.

I went directly to the front of the boat, my favorite spot, one of which I never tire when crossing the river, and exulted over two things—that I was alone, and that I had eluded Harry Underwood.

The boat was moving slowly out of the slip when his voice, cautiously low, but full of exultant mischief, sounded behind me.

"Well played, Lady Fair, but you'll have to get up earlier in the morning to fool your Uncle Dudley."

Silverton Cemetery May Have Concrete Driveway

SILVERTON, Ore., Jan. 26.—(Special to The Statesman).—At a recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, G. E. Anderson, J. L. Stalker and John Small were appointed as a committee to draft specifications for the building of a concrete highway about 800 feet in length to be used as an entrance to the Silverton cemetery. The money for the construction of the road has been raised by popular subscription.

Lands in City Jail After Hanging Paper in Salem

O. Whitlach, aged 21, is said to have succeeded in passing a worthless check yesterday, but he did not escape the clutches of the law. The youth had cashed a $15 check on the story that he was the private chauffeur of Mrs. Olds, of the Olds, Wortman & King, who was visiting in Salem.

It is alleged that Whitlach has a suspended sentence of six months hanging over his head, and it is thought he has been implicated in other matters around Salem.

S. Swegle, who was with Whitlach at the time, was also taken in toll by the police.

Corn for General Feeding Purposes Can Be Raised

"In the sections where the winter wheat was killed by the recent freeze corn is to be planted, according to the reports that are made from southern and western Oregon.

Early maturing varieties of corn like Minnesota number 13 and the improved early strains of golden glow as well as others of the early yellow varieties, may be grown on a very much larger scale to be used for grain purposes, says the experiment station. These early corns may be husked and stored in a crib safely, and serves as food for poultry, hogs and cattle.

Directions for the construction of corn cribs can write the Agricultural college at Corvallis.

bill made vacant by the unexpected illness of another actor.

Other hits were the "O. S. P. Syncopators," a seven-piece aggrecer, sergeant-at-arms in the senate.

HB No. 11, preventing stock from running at large in Linn county passed a second reading, as did a similar measure from Hood River country. Other bills presented were:

SB No. 68, by Senator Upton, requiring life insurance associations organized on the assessment plan, to use the word "assessment" in their certificates and advertising matter in order to prevent the use of misleading descriptive matter.

SB No. 70, introduced by Senator F. J. Toze, provides that if it is desired to dissolve a union high school, ten or more legal voters residing in the district must sign the petition, but not more than one-third of the total number of legal voters in the district is necessary.

The senate concurred with the suggestion of Governor Pierce that W. H. Fuller be named as a member of the board of regents of the Oregon Normal School.

NURSERYMEN HIT BY COLD WEATHER

Walnut Trees Thought Hurt While Cherry Trees Escape Hard Frost

County Fruit Inspector Van Trump, who has made a survey of the damage sustained by nursery stock during the past cold weather, has come to the conclusion that a hard blow has been dealt. Perhaps 50 per cent has been felt by nurserymen, both to the young trees that were left in the ground and those heeled in the ground for the winter. Improper treatment of the young trees in the heeling process is the reason given by the inspector for the losses shown.

Walnut trees have been injured, but it is thought that cherries have escaped. Loganberries have been damaged in part where the snow was less than four inches.

Prunes came through without much damage and it is thought that no particular injury was done to the buds of the trees.

Strawberries did not suffer, although they appear to be badly hurt by crownborers.

Design for Y Building Announced by Committee

The exterior design of the new Salem YMCA building has been selected by the building committee and the board of directors who met yesterday for the conference. The plans submitted by Kenneth Legge, Salem architect, who is working with Architect Whiteside of Portland, gave the exterior design and some of the elevations of the building.

According to the design selected the building will be of the Italian renaissance type, the facing of which has not been selected.

At another meeting of the board of directors and the building committee the material to be used in the building will be determined as well as other matters that are under consideration.
