ARMORY REVIVAL

Services Sunday: At 2:30 p.m. there will be a Divine healing service, subject "Himself took our infirmities and bear our sicknesses." At 7:30 p.m. the subject will be "How soon may we expect Christ to return?" Meetings every night this week at 7:30.

People from all parts of the city report having been stirred and edified by the wonderful messages going forth in the power of the Spirit of God. Souls are being saved and filled with the Holy Spirit as in the early days of the church. The public is invited to take advantage of this valuable opportunity to hear God's wonderful prophecies unfolded.

Pretty soon the jokes about cross-word puzzles will be far greater in number than the puzzles themselves.

"My daddy's taller than yours," boasted Eddie.

"He isn't," retorted Jack, indignantly. "My daddy's so tall that he has to stand on a chair to put his collar on."

FELLOW MINISTERS PRAISE DR. KANTNER

Resolutions Adopted on His Decision to Retire From Active Pastoral Duties

To our beloved brother minister, W. C. Kantner: Having been informed of your decision to retire from active pastoral duties in the near future, we, your fellow-ministers and co-workers in Salem, desire to express our high appreciation of your fellowship and friendship. We congratulate ourselves upon being your associates in the ministry of Christ. We feel that you have always given dignity and honor to the calling and that your example is worthy of emulation.

We esteem you for your Christion, spirit and the splendid achievements of your fruitful ministry. Our community has been enriched in faith, ennobled in life, and exalted in ideal, because of your presence and labor of love. Yours is the light of undying stars, ever directing through the shadows of life to the glories of the more perfect day. In laying aside the activities of the pastorate, we wish you to know that you carry with you the love of multitudes and that your influence will continue to cheer and bless through coming years. We rejoice with you in the contemplation of such worthiness.

We shall hold you in kind remembrance and shall wish for you joy and happiness supreme through all remaining days. May the peace that passeth understanding and the love that knows no ending be your comfort and your richly deserved reward.

London Searched in Vain For Shrinking Girls of 1890

LONDON, Jan. 31—Released from Broadmoor jail after 34 years' confinement, Mr. B——saw a motorcar in the streets of London the other day for the first time. Recounting his impression to the War Cry, Mr. B—— said: "When I saw London again I particularly noticed two things. One was the speed of the traffic, and the other the independent air of the young women. When I last saw the traffic you could saunter across the road at Kings Cros, and all the young women were shy. But now——"

PROTECTING PUBLIC HEALTH

Editor Statesman:—

Protecting the public health is a subject which comes before every legislature. Our present legislative session is no exception to the rule and I wish to express my ideas along this line before these various measures take form and create an acrimonious discussion.

It is the duty of the legislature to protect the public health by such laws as experience has demonstrated are necessary and made to protect the public health instead of protecting one class of healers from competition with others just as efficient but differing in methods of practice.

At the present time there are several hundred communities and villages of considerable size throughout the Pacific Northwest in which no resident physician of any school resides, or is to be found. These people rarely need the services of a skilled specialist. Their ailments are almos wholly of such a nature that the services of a general practitioner cares for their needs. Such a practitioner will be able to advise his patients when to seek the services of a specialist.

Laws which place around the practice of the healing arts such radical restrictions and difficult requirements as to constitute a barrier to the profession so high as to exclude all but the sons of very rich men, invariably defeat their own ends. Designed, as they are supposed to be, to protect the public against incompetent and ignorant fakirs, result in the multiplication of cheap schools of all sorts of freak names ending in some form of "pathic" which is designed to beat the law and supply a public demand for some form of general practioner of the healing art who is willing to locate in the smaller cities and villages.

A graduate who has spent from 11 to 15 years in preparation to enable him to enter the profession can not afford to locate outside the cities having centers of population able to pay for services commeasurate with the time and money he has spent in preparation. We have an example of it in our nurse law. A professional nurse now can only be employed by very rich people or in surgical cases where her skill is necessary. The requirements are such that the supply is limited. A poor girl can hardly hope to work her was through the school and training required.

The "Practical" nurse has developed in response to the demand for a nurse who is able to attend the vast majority of cases. The same demand will develop the "Practical" healer of some school or other but who will usually fall far short of the knowledge and healing ability of a general practitioner who has worked his way through a reasonable set of regulations regarding his educational and professional training.

So, in drafting whatever law is passed by this legislature it will be wise to consider all the factors which enter into the problem of protecting the public health and consider with great caution the actual practical workings of such a law. Will it restrict the number of physicians to specialists who are able to spend many years and much money in preparation, thereby eliminating the general practitioner, the peoples physician, and stimulate the growth of cheap freak schools of healing?
