LISBON, Feb. 5 .- The Portuguese republic is in a fair way of becoming a complacent land of refuge for the Communist who has no country and the royal prince who has no home. Driven out from other countries of Europe these wanderers seem to head for Portugal, on the western edge of Europe, and cause trouble for the Lisbon police. There is no other state to which they can be passed along, and vessels dropping anchor in the Tagus do not seem to want and the

them as passengers. Some of the Communists travel like princes, and there is here today one prince in particular who looks like a shabby suspect. Hotel reporters are sometimes at a loss whether to address a new guest as "your highness," or sim-Jauce)

ply "comrade." The followers of Communism, under the influence of the warm Portuguese weather, often assume the mild and satisfied air of people who are taking the rest cure. As for the prince, a relative of the King of Spain who recently was driven out of France, this man stalks about moodily and bemoans his banishment from the pleasures of Montmartre.

You must figure out things if you are going to outfigure them.

Memory of Briton Kept Alive By Annual Service

LONDON, Feb. 5 .- One of the most ancient memorial services held annually in London is that of the Worshipful Company of Coopers. It was originated by the terms of the will of Henry Click-ton A er, date May 10, 1573, which provided "that the Master and War-Ancient City in Nevada dens of the Company of Coopers after ve decease of my wife, shall upon New Year's Day, at afterother prehistoric city was found noon, yearly for ever, at a rearecently 30 miles east of Beatty, sonable hour, in the church of St. at the head of Forty Mile Canyon.
