CHAPTER 379

WHAT MADGE COMPELLED DICKY TO AGREE TO DO

The feline side of me, hidden somewhere in almost every woman—and in many men, for that matter—was so absorbed in the game of delicately punishing Dicky for the humiliation he had put upon me that it had dulled my generally lively realization of my husband's hair-trigger temper.

But my perceptions were suddenly sharpened when, at my languid request to spare me the details of his explanation, he muttered a savage exclamation, and thrust his white, tense face close to mine, his eyes blazing with anger.

"So, that's the way you're going to perform, is it?" he snarled. "Well, two can play at that game!"

UPSET STOMACH, GAS, INDIGESTION

Chew a few Pleasant Tablets, —Stomach Feels Fine!

So pleasant, so inexpensive, so quick to settle an upset stomach. The moment "Pape's Diapensin" reaches the stomach all pain and distress from indigestion or a sour, gassy stomach vanishes. —Millions know its magic. All druggists recommend this harmless stomach corrective.—Adv.

I've tried to be decent about it, but I'm through. I'll get out here and walk back to the nearest railroad station, and you and Claire Foster and every other woman in the world can go to the devil!"

He leaned forward and raised his hand to tap on the glass separating us from the taxi driver; but with an agile movement and a strength which I did not know I possessed, I grasped his hand. Taking advantage of his surprise and his cramped position, I forced Dicky back into his seat, and leaned over him in such a manner that he would have been compelled to push me violently away in order to reach the glass again. Then I spoke, slowly, icily, with some genuine anger and much more that was assumed in my voice.

"Of Course, You're Right."

"You've tried to be decent about it!" I repeated. "You've tried to be decent! And you're going through? No, you're not. You're going to listen to me for a minute or two. I didn't get you into this scrape, and I don't care a button about it one way or the other except for one thing. For our boy's sake, and your mother's and my own, I do not want any more publicity about it than we have had. You sent for me, and I came, not because you sent for me, but because I saw that in no other way could I stop this fool thing being aired, all over this section. The reporters were already on the job when I left, and are on the road to the resort now."

"And let me tell you now," I went on so swiftly he had no chance to interrupt, "you're not going to spoil my plans with anger, because I don't play the patient Griselda and listen to your explanations! I'll play that role in public, but not in private, thank you. I'm going to depict the loving, guileless, unsuspecting wife, for all the part is worth, and I'm going to take Claire Foster with me if she'll go. And you're going to play up to me every second of the time until we're safe from spying eyes. After that I don't care what you do. But you certainly owe me that much!"

Before I had finished speaking his hand and body had relaxed their angry tension, and he had slumped down into his seat. But there was a long-minute of palpitant, potential silence before he spoke.

"Of course, you're right," he said at last, and there was no anger in his voice, only a note of weary bitterness, which, queerly enough, sent a tiny apprehensive thrill through me. "You always are. And I'm an abysmal brute, a Gadarene swine, and all the rest of it. And I'll play up all right;—both in public and private. You need not fear any further annoyance."

Madge Is Apprehensive.

I let go his hand and sank back into the seat with a perfunctory "Thank you." To my surprise I found that I was trembling as from a chill, though I was warmly wrapped, and the night was not

World Hunters Consume Surplus Dictionaries

LONDON, Feb. 5.—When news of how the cross-word puzzle craze had gripped America first seeped across the Atlantic to this little island, newspaper paragraphers assumed a somewhat superior air and pointed out that such foolishness wasn't the rule in England. Now nearly every newspaper publishes its daily puzzles and large prizes are offered for solutions and new problems.

So completely has the fad caught the public's fancy that one firm of second hand booksellers has reported that the demand for cheap dictionaries far outstrips the supply, and that its entire supply of dictionaries and books of synonyms has been exhausted, with dictionaries going at the rate of 50 or more a day, and synonym books at 25 a day. Even dictionaries dated in the '40's and '50's of the last century are being snapped up.

In their search for novelties puzzle editors have departed largely from the conventional squares and rectangles, and puzzles have become especially cold. I could have uttered nothing else calmly if my life had depended upon it.

"For though I was secretly elated at my victory, there was that in Dicky's bitter, weary tones which vaguely frightened me. I realized that I had been a bit intoxicated with the heady draught which the words of Mr. Rickett, the reporter, had given me.

"He doesn't know whether she cares a button for him," Mr. Rickett had said, referring to Dicky, and he also had praised what he called my marvellous self-control. With the clarity which a sudden jolt sometimes gives, I saw that the fabric of my just resentment at Dicky had been heavily embroidered with fanciful ideas of living-up to the picture Mr. Rickett had drawn of me.

Had I overdone it? My mental eyes were clearing and I knew that while I desired to punish my husband, and my cold wrath against him was still strong within me, yet I did not wish to give him a wound which would not heal.

But there was no retracing my steps now. I had committed myself to the role I was playing, and I must go on with it. And there was no opportunity for any change in my attitude, for, in the next minute or two, the taxi turned into a driveway and drew up before the lighted door and windows of a large house, evidently our destination.

Women Unite in Seeking New Political Positions

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Exhibits symbolizing the varied activities of the twentieth century woman and depicting the slow broadening of the field of feminine enterprise until it embraces two American state capitols, supreme court judgeships in several states, high place in the professions and prominence in the world's political affairs, are being assembled here from many lands for the first Woman's World's fair, to be held at the American Exposition Palace on Lake Michigan, April 18-25.

In addition, hundreds of commercial exhibits will reveal the feminine hand in the business world and in the arts of the day. Several hundred booths crowded with specimens from a score of countries will be arranged to record woman's contributions in economics, politics, science and social culture to the world around.

A group of prominent Chicago women is behind a corporation organized especially to promote the fair, and women will direct virtually every detail of the enterprise. Miss Helen M. Bennett, long diligent in women's activities and originator of the fair idea, is managing director of the venture. The boards of directors includes Mrs. Joseph T. Bowman, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. George R. Dean, Mrs. Silas Strawn and Mrs. Medill McCormick, all leaders in society and women's club work.

One feature of the exhibit will be a collection of newspaper and magazine clippings from various countries during the last 200 years emphasizing the storm of protest which greeted every suggestion for a freer social status for women.
