ALL IS WELL.—Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you so. I go to prepare a place for you. John 14:1-2.
PRAYER.—Lord, increase our faith and then we will cast all our care on Thee, for Thou carest for us.

"COUNTY AGENT TO HELP LANE FARMERS"

(Eugene Guard)

"Results vastly helpful to the farmers of Lane county may be expected to come out of the re-establishment of a county agricultural agent with headquarters here. That the farmers are interested in the event is shown by the sheafs of letters that are already coming into the agent's office, with inquiries for information pertaining to the work.

"The chief value of the work of a county agent lies in the fact that it is a work of demonstration. The farmers are taught how to improve methods and seeds and soils and stocks of all kinds by practical experimentation before their eyes. One may be merely told of a way to improve some one or more of his methods without much enthusiasm being aroused, but when the improvement is carried out before his eyes and its value made apparent beyond a doubt, then there is pretty certain to be response and adoption of the innovation. That is the kind of thing that the county agent does.

"The county agent's work is made possible through co-operation by the federal department of agriculture, Oregon Agricultural college and Lane county. Whatever innovations it offers are the products of the best thought of the two agencies first named. O. S. Fletcher is Lane county's new agent. It will be worth the while of farmers generally to place themselves in touch with his operations, and doubtless they will do so."

The above, from the Eugene Guard, shows that Lane county, after being without the services of a county agent for some time, has decided that she needs the help of such a man in keeping her agricultural development active.

And the writer believes Marion county is in the same class.

And this county ought to have an agricultural agent—And that the right kind of an agricultural agent would be worth many times his reasonable salary, if he were the right kind of an agent—if he were qualified, industrious and enthusiastic, and with the right qualities of leadership and the proper ability to impart his knowledge.

Marion county is the greatest county in the Pacific Northwest in an agricultural way. But she is capable of being more outstandingly so, and in this regard she needs the sort of leadership that would be supplied by the right kind of a county agent.

S. H. Van Trump, Marion county fruit inspector, has for a long time been acting also in a general way as county agent; and he is a good man and understands agriculture generally as well as fruit growing specially. But there is plenty of work for both a fruit inspector and an agricultural agent.

Lane county has done well to re-establish her agricultural agent, and Marion county would do well to follow suit.

Without neglecting any other worthy call, the plan to raise the money to pay off the debt on the soldier monument ought to be put through. The sum is $1320, and it will be raised this week if enough tickets are bought for the American Legion ball on Saturday night, at 50 cents each—and they are being taken very generally. Nearly every thing in connection with the ball is being donated. So every cent you pay for a ticket from now on goes towards the debt—for enough tickets were sold the first hour of the first day to pay all the cash charges against the ball.

THE RED CROSS

It is hardly necessary to urge upon the people of Salem the desirability of supporting or sustaining the Red Cross. At this particular time the appeal should be stronger because the work being done is general relief for the soldiers. Now if there is one thing above another that the people of Salem want, it is to have the defenders of the country properly looked after, and in doing this work the Red Cross is doing precisely what Salem would have it do and what each resident of the city would himself do if he were in a position to do it. This is a clubbing together of residents who want to do a great piece of work and yet can not do it individually, but by uniting their interests they can do it splendidly. The Red Cross makes its own appeal. The Statesman does not need to make an appeal. We are simply calling attention to the fact that the drive is now on.

A RESTLESS MAN AT REST

America has had no more restless nor picturesque figure than Thomas W. Lawson, who has just died. At the age of 77 he ran away and went into finance. During all the following years he never had an idle moment. One hour he was a millionaire and the next he was broke, but he was always doing something, always alert. A few years ago Lawson conceived the idea of exposing frenzied finance. He came mighty near upsetting the world. He was getting along fine when it was discovered that he was himself speculating and doing the very things he was denouncing hundreds of thousands of dollars to have stopped. He discredited himself before the public, but Lawson did a good work in calling attention to

Golden Wedding Celebrated By Chief Justice McBride

Chief Justice Thomas A. McBride and Mrs. McBride celebrated their golden wedding anniversary recently at their home at Deer Island, Ore., which was the scene of their marriage February 7, 1875. They have not lived there during all this time, however, as over 30 years was spent elsewhere.

George McBride, and May McBride Newton, the two children of Chief Justice and Mrs. McBride, were present. No other relatives were present. Congratulations were received, however, from many of their friends.

Justice McBride stated that two days before his marriage 50 years ago, he skated across the Columbia river to be present for the occasion.

OREGON GRIDDERS OUT
EUGENE, Ore., Feb. 9.—Over 29 candidates for center and backfield berths on the 1925 University of Oregon football team turned out today, the first day of spring football practice. Next week candidates for the line will be called.

Even though it was an army dentist a soldier shot in Washington, we say he shouldn't have done it.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Biggest dance ever—
Over 3000 people to dance Saturday.
That is what it looks like, the way the American Legion St. Valentine ball tickets are selling.
Every cent you can pay for a dance ticket goes to pay off the debt on the soldier monument; the idea being to clean it all up out of these tickets. The debt is $1320.

The legislature is enacting another consolidation law—to consolidate the departments. But it merely provides that the matter be studied and presented to the next legislature. In Oregon, such reports have on the whole not fared very well. We have seen many of them, and excellent reports, too, thrown into the scrap heap.
The high Etola hills were white yesterday morning; but the thin mantle of snow did not last long.

In his latest book H. G. Wells says he is against the clothes we wear, the food we eat, our schools, our amusements, our money, our methods of trading, our compromises, our agreements, laws, political associations, the British Empire and the American Constitution. Beyond that he refuses to go. He may still be for heaven's too.

There's always something. If it isn't hunger that makes men discontented, it's indigestion.
That scientist who says we may live on air isn't guessing. He has been studying Armenia.

At times it isn't the overhead that endangers a young business so much as the swellhead.
It is savage to sacrifice children in the name of religion; we do it only in the name of speed.

In one hour comes complete elimination. All that irritates, all that poisons is removed. You start the day fit, happy, energetic, like a child of ten.
Millions do that now. If the day looks gloomy, they take Jad Salts in their morning drink. Then everything is sunny in an hour.

You will save those lost days when you find this out, and will thank us for it. Start tomorrow. See what a difference Jad Salts make. At all druggists.—Adv.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

CHAPTER 380

THE WAY MADGE "OPENED FIRE" ON MRS. BARKER.

I looked curiously at the lighted house before which we had drawn up, the house which held Claire Foster, and in which I instinctively felt I would be compelled to act warily if I were to avoid a scene.

It was evidently a summer hotel of the remodeled up-state farmhouse type, and upon its broad front veranda were several women swathed in heavy wraps, ostensibly enjoying the moonlight upon the distant mountains.

That some of them were genuinely indifferent to my arrival, I knew, for the guests at a mountain resort in the late fall are generally autumn lovers, and pay no attention to anything else save the delights of the Indian summer. But I was sure from the furtive glances of two of the women nearest the door that they had been watching for my arrival, and anticipating the pleasurable prospect of a possible exciting row.

Dicky stalked up the steps, looking neither to the right nor the left. He had assisted me from the taxi, and kept his hand beneath my elbow as I mounted the steps. Just before we reached them he made some remark about the beauty of the moonlight upon the mountains, palpably an attempt to play the game as I had requested. I answered him with equal casualness, but gave a whimsical twist to my answer, and accompanied it with a light little laugh for the benefit of the sisk tabbies on the veranda.

Dicky's answering laugh was a bit hollow, but plausible enough, and I had my reward for our effort in seeing, from beneath my lowered eyelids, a turning of heads on the veranda, and hearing a crescendo in the creaking of the veranda rocking chairs.

"How is Miss Foster?" Dicky sounded an imperative tattoo upon the door. Almost immediately it was opened by a tall, spare woman, whose abundant hair with streaks of its original red showing through the gray of advanced middle age, was wound tightly around her head. Her eyes were blue, cold, keen. And there was a suppressed hostility in her manner which did not escape me.

That she related neither the publicty, Dicky's escapade had brought upon her house, nor his reappearance, was plainly to be seen; and I could not blame her. Justice made me admit that in her place I should, no doubt, have felt as she did. But, curiously enough, in the face of her cold disapproval, I began to feel a real chumminess of my husband and Claire Foster.

The hurried introduction which Dicky mumbled gave me only her name, "Mrs. Barker," and I repeated it with a forced smile. The first thing on the program, I saw, was the placating of Mrs. Barker, and though I distinctly did not relish the task, there was nothing else for me to undertake it.

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night.
Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowies Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.—Adv.

The Woman Pays

For morning grouchies, start every day with good cheer
Ill nature in the morning is the result of accumulated poisons. These are easy to eliminate. Drink a glass of water before breakfast. That washes out the stomach and fits it for food.
Add to that water a little Jad Salts. Then you have an acid effervescent drink. It is delightful wish to wait longer before coming to my friend, Miss Foster. How is she?"

Mrs. Barker stared frankly at me before answering. That my attitude astonished her, upset some of her preconceived ideas of the situation, I was sure.

"I guess she's all right," she said at last grudgingly. "I haven't seen her since she came back here yesterday morning. But the girl who took up her meals asked her if she needed a doctor or anything, and Miss Foster told her all she needed was rest, so—we let her have it."
A Breathless Moment.

There was a grimness about the thin lips of Mrs. Barker which betrayed how thorough was her disapproval of Claire Foster, and how glad she would be when the girl should leave her house. Indeed, I strongly suspected that while the woman had too much principle to send a guest away still suffering from a shock such as Claire Foster had received, still she was only waiting for the girl's recovery to ask for her room.

"I am so glad," I said with an air of extreme relief. "When Mr. Graham wired me of the accident to his airplane I was so worried for fear Claire might have been hurt or shocked nervously. She is so venturesome, and so delights in flying! I wish I were as brave. My husband has tried so often to have me go up, but I am too much of a coward. He tells me I'm missing the greatest sport in the world, and I suppose I am, but I cannot help it."
"Do you think Miss Foster will be able to travel tomorrow?" I said with deep solicitude. "I do so want to take her home with me, and I ought not to stay over the day."

I had let her have it all at once, a bit hurriedly, as I imagined an unsuspecting mouse of a wife would talk, and I waited breathlessly for her answer.

Bandit Hunt Kees Wires Busy; Rod Rider-Is Taken

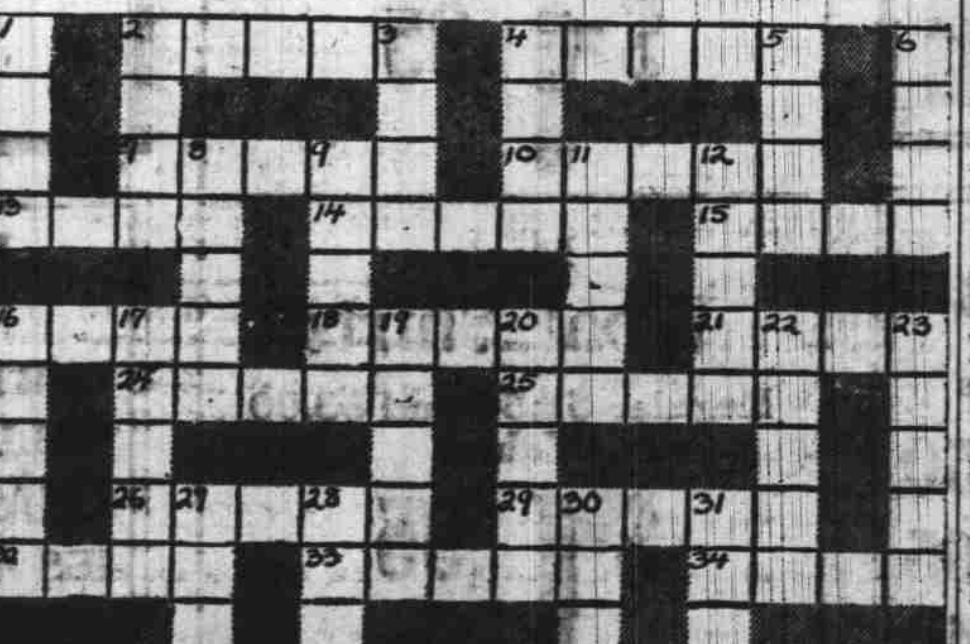

Every station on the Southern Pacific company was on the alert last night to secure the arrest of Roy D'antremont, alleged murderer of a train crew in the hold-up in the Siskiyou tunnel last year who was reported to have boarded a train at Oregon City. Officer Olsen and James were sent to the Southern Pacific yards here where they kept a careful lookout for the supposed outlaw.

Dispatchers kept the wires busy reporting the progress of the hunt, which terminated at Salem when the officers found the man answering the description riding on a freight train. It turned out, however, that the fellow was a "weaty wille," who had been mistaken for the alleged murderer. The visions of the $5000 reward was quickly dispelled when the traveler established his identity. He was booked at the station as a sleeper.

Near Hagerstown, Md., an auto killed a wolf. The driver may claim he thought it was a pedestrian.
