BIBLE THOUGHT AND PRAYER
Prepared by Radio BIBLE SERVICE Bureau, Cincinnati, Ohio.
If parents will have their children memorize the daily Bible selections, it will prove a priceless heritage to them in after years.

February 11, 1925

A SONG OF THANKSGIVING:—Oh that men would praise the Lord for His goodness, and for His wonderful works to the children of men! O come, let us sing unto the Lord; let us come before His presence with thanksgiving. For He is our God, and we are the people of His pasture. Psalm 107:8; 95:1, 2, 7.

PRAYER:—We would bless the Lord at all times. May this praise be continually in our mouths.

PLENTY OF FLAX GROWERS

Some busybody has filled up a newspaper reporter with the notion that the farmers may not grow flax for the state; therefore the new Miles linen mill may not be able to get fiber—.

And the devil will be to pay generally.

Forget it. The contracts already actually signed and those spoken for make up almost as large an acreage as the state flax plant will be able to handle this year; with the stocks of flax left over from last year and the year before—

And there has been no canvassing whatever. All the contracting growers have come in or sent in voluntarily.

It is likely that the Starling linen mill, to be assembled at Vancouver, for which machinery is already being loaded on the cars in the East, will back some threshing and scutching plants, and will contract for 3000 acres or more of flax, to be grown in the Salem district this year.

No doubt the Starling people will be able to get the contracts. The state flax plant will do everything possible to encourage flax growing, by outsiders. It is threshing and conserving seed, and will speed up this work, with a view to accommodating independent growers and manufacturers.

If any one has an idea that the state flax plant people are to be jealous of other buyers of flax from the farmers, he has another guess coming.

There cannot be too much flax grown; as long as there are buyers for it. There should soon be 50,000 acres annually, and more. The state plant can use the product of only 2000 to 3000 acres, or 4000 at the most.

REVIVE THE LOGANBERRY INDUSTRY

"There is a tide in the affairs of men which taken at the flood leads on to fortune; omitted and all the voyage of their life is bound in shallows and in miseries," said Shakespeare, if memory serves the writer correctly.

That is the case of the loganberry industry now.

All over the country druggists are dispensing large quantities of iodine. It is a comparatively cheap drug, the cost to the pharmacist being slight, though the consumer pays 25 to 50 cents for a two-ounce bottle, the chief content of which is distilled water.

Formerly iodine, or iodide of potassium, was more or less of a joke among doctors, who called it a "shotgun remedy." When a country physician didn't know what was the matter with a patient he prescribed a few drops of it after meals three times a day—

But now is has come into more favorable repute. It is regularly prescribed for many ailments, including vertigo, arteriosclerosis or hardening of the arteries, and for goiter and other thyroid troubles.

Up to a few years ago the cause of goiter was a mystery, but of late it has been attributed to a lack of iodine in the water drunk by the victim of the malady. The disease being most commonly found in mountainous regions, particularly in or near the Alps, where the water supply is chiefly melted snow, which contains no iodine, it was inferred that in the lack of that necessary mineral salt lay the whole trouble. This has been proved to be the case, and now persons afflicted with goiter are given liberal doses of iodide of potassium.

Persons living near the ocean rarely have goiters save in an occasional case where there is a hereditary tendency. Where the drinking water is drawn from a well not far from the sea it is believed that the disease will not be readily contracted. This is because ocean water contains liberal quantities of iodine, which filters through the soil or was there originally in an old ocean bed. It is thought by some that much of the invigorating quality of sea air is the result of its being laden with iodides. When kelp or other seaweeds are burned iodine is found in their ashes. In fact, this is one way of securing it for medical or chemical purposes.

Many people are no doubt doing more harm than good to their systems by using iodine. It is a potent drug and, even where taken in very small doses for a few months, may produce dyspepsia, dry catarrh and other ailments. It should be taken only on the advice of a competent physician, who rarely will proscribe liberal doses except in desperate cases.

The layman who tries to save himself a doctor's fee by administering powerful drugs to himself, to cure some ailment that he probably never had, often will find such tampering with nature a dangerous as well as expensive proceeding—

But there seems no doubt concerning the fact that the lack of iodine is the chief if not the only cause of goiters—

And, as the writer said some days ago, here is the opportunity for a swift and permanent revival of the loganberry industry; for the loganberry has the largest iodine content of any fruit grown; in fact, of any vegetable growth.

Eat loganberries and avoid or cure goiter.

Let that slogan be sounded around the world, with a merchandising campaign built on sound principles, and all our idle and slacker acres in the Willamette valley could be profitably set to loganberries.

REGARDING EDUCATION

A mighty big question was opened in the senate recently in the bill limiting the curriculum of the high school. Much eloquence was poured out on both sides. The bill passed the senate but few of the senators had any idea of its real import. We are not saying it is not a good bill; it may be. We are saying that it is a forcible strike at the tendency of the times. The times may be wrong; our education may be wrong.

For a number of years we fed our children on husks. We made them stand up and toe the mark for the three R's. Now we are giving them full ears of corn and letting the husks go to waste. Educators believe this is a recognition of the changed national point of view and placed education where it belongs. Education was once the Cinderella of the body politic. It was regarded as a sort of a drudge. It seldom was administered to the women and only to a few men. Recently education has been growing so fast that it has been made available and administered to millions of people. Then rose the necessity of providing avenues for the different tendencies of minds. The three R's were discredited and we had a thousand different lines of thought trying to accommodate a million different minds. All education has spread out and taken all these many lines, every line of which is education. It is unfair to say that you can make a narrow, iron-bound curriculum and hold the children to it. They are bound to break over this. We have got to provide them with enough avenues that the different trends of minds can be accommodated.

In the recollection of men now in that senate the general public regarded educators either as pedants or as mild cranks. But this last label has become meaningless because school men can attract large audiences, and there are so many ways to ventilate views. The fact is that education has had to fight for every inch of ground it has taken, but in spite of all obstacles it is coming into its proper relationship of human endeavor. It is not the exclusive right of one class and the male members of that class and it is not given as a grudging concession to the world, including the women. It is given as a right, and we have broadened our views so as to establish the right of every child, no matter where born, to a fair chance for an education. Education gives us more love and feeling for the beautiful, the great, the true, and as long as education remains true to that aim it serves its purpose. It is not primarily concerned with mere livelihood. As we remarked, it is a broad question and one that demands careful thought and should not be passed upon by the senate under the sway of eloquence or the fear of pedagogy domination.

A PITY

America must respect its senate next to the supreme court. The recent spectacle of taking a month to confirm Attorney General Stone as associate justice of the supreme court is not calculated to heighten the esteem in which the senate is held. Mr. Stone went before the committee in a straightforward manner which made it impossible to refuse to confirm him, yet he has been annoyed almost beyond endurance and hounded in order to get him to withdraw the prosecution of Senator Wheeler.

The nation, however, because of this episode, feels a mighty sight surer of the supreme court. It knows there is a man on the bench who will not play cheap politics nor submit to brow-beating tactics. A senator of the United States is not sacred, but he should be entitled to respect. He is outside the pale if he lends himself to prevent a fellow member from answering to the bar of justice for his misdeeds. To do this is no better than for an outlaw gang to hide one of its wanted members in the mountains.

Nothing could be fairer than the treatment accorded Senator Wheeler. The attorney in charge is a new appointee of Mr. Stone's, Mr. Donovan of New York, a man of proved courage and unquestioned integrity. The new charges grow out of different facts from those upon which the original indictment was based. They concern others than Senator Wheeler and are centered in Washington, where an investigation should properly be held.

Instead of welcoming this precedent, protected by every safeguard of the law, Senator Wheeler seems to hold that he can do no wrong and is, in effect, above the law. He and his counsel, Senator Walsh, appear to believe that the prosecutor must try his case before them and their fellow senators. That was exactly what a senate committee did before, as it happens.

THE HUMAN ELEMENT

The world paused in its busy course twice in the past week. One time when a dog team took anti toxin to Nome to save the lives of children. There was a sentiment in that, of course. It aroused the chivalry of the world and the world looked on wonderingly while those dogs mushed through the terrible elements on their errand of mercy. Such things show humanity at its best. Then again when the supply was inadequate, an aviator at Fairbanks offered to make the hazardous trip in an airplane. The cry went up that it meant death. His heroic wife said she was willing for her husband to go if she could go along. Ah! how splendid are these Americans!

Again an unknown miner got caught in the rocks in a small Kentucky town. The whole world watched and wished well the arms of the rescuers. Hour followed hour, day followed day, and for one life all this sympathy went out.

Listen! These things show the sentiment that hovers around the heart of every man, but we must not forget that we hold life cheaply in America, that men are killed every day and their murderers go unpunished. We have a wave of crime, a wave of murder, if you please, that is demanding the same concentrated attention that was given to Nove and Cave, Kentucky.

Mrs. Emma Beckett was hostess last Thursday when she entertained the Book and Thimble club at her home on 640 North Thirteenth street.

The rooms were decorated with pussy willows and daffodils which heralded the coming of spring. During the afternoon Mrs. Schwartz assembled the favorite songs of the club—no two alike—and hymns were in the majority, after which she conducted an interesting flower study. Mrs. L. F. Brown was able to name the greatest number of correct flower names for the substitutes.

During the social hour Mrs. CharlesCharles Adams entertained those present with a reading "Cremation of Sam McGee," and Miss Gaynelle Beckett also contributed a reading, both of which were much enjoyed. The club sang several selections.

Miss Gaynelle Beckett assisted the hostess in serving with the following present:

Mrs. Marion Putnam, Miss Bechtel, Robert Putnam, Mrs. Ada Lake and Miss Helen Putnam, special visitors, and Mrs. E. Pattison, Mrs. Mary Beaver, Mrs. L. F. Brown, Mrs. E. Manning, Mrs. C. I. Adams, Mrs. Charles Schwartz, Mrs. M. Gehlor, Mrs. F. H. Bentley and the hostess, Mrs. E. Beckett.

The First Baptist church was chosen at the luncheon yesterday at the YWCA to be hostess-church for the annual Day of Prayer for Missions, set for Friday, February 27. An all-day program, following the plan of the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions, was adopted. A covered dish luncheon will be served at noon. All churches in Salem will be expected to take part.

The MP bridge club met for an enjoyable afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ed Pratt on Monday, with Mrs. W. C. Franklin as a special guest. The rooms were festive with decorating hearts and red tulips. The Valentine motif predominated again in the refreshments. The high playing score of the afternoon was won by Mrs. Albert C. Smith.

Included in the club group are: Mrs. I. L. Darby, Mrs. W. A. Marshall, Mrs. Albert S. Smith, Mrs. Al H. Steiner, Mrs L. A. Grote, Mrs. I. W. Follis, Mrs. Ernest Peterson, and the hostess of the week, Mrs Ed Pratt..

The club will meet on February 23 with Mrs. W. A. Marshall.

Glands need Glands

Feed them extracts from glands

One of the greatest discoveries in modern medicine is how to make glands active. It is done by extracts and secretions from glands. New-day science is doing wonders in that way.

The liver is our largest, most important gland. We have learned that drugs do not affect it. But ox gall does. So we are now getting through the liver results we never knew before.

Poisons in the Blood

Torpid liver means to most people merely constipation. But it really brings a vast percentage of our troubles.

The liver supplies bile—a quart a day when normal. That bile checks germs in the intestines. When that bile is scant, the germs breed unmolested. And they feed a constant stream of poisons to the blood.

Some results appear quickly—bad complexions, dull eyes, pimples, falling hair. But there are greater results, and some are disastrous.

Those poisons may cause heart and kidney troubles, high blood pressure, premature old age. And the only way to stop those troubles is to check the poisons.

See How Things Change

See how ox gall changes things. Results start in 24 hours. In a few days it may bring results which may change your entire life. You may find that this is all you need.

But get genuine ox gall. It comes in tablets called Dioxol. Your druggist can supply them. Each tablet is guaranteed to supply 10 drops of purified ox gall. You get the full effects.

Remember the name—Dioxol. Use it now. Let it correct whatever troubles it can end. To many it means priceless help, which no drug method can attain.

Guarantee: Anyone not satisfied with results from the first box of Dioxol may return the empty box to the makers and receive his money back.—Adv.
