CAPT. F. C. STEARNS shares the birthday of Abraham Lincoln—February 12—and on Thursday celebrated with an anniversary dinner at his home, Captain Stearns, too, was born in a log cabin, though the log cabin was in Maine, 60 years ago, while in the merchant service. Captain Stearns sailed around Cape Horn to the Pacific coast. Fourteen years ago he came from Iowa to Oregon to make his home.

In honor of Captain Stearns' birthday, Mrs. Stearns entertained at a 6 o'clock family dinner at the Stearns home, 180 South 19th street, with three of Mr. Stearns' nine children in attendance. Covers at the table, attractive with daffodils, and with potted plants about the room, were placed for Mr. Stearns of Medford, Mr. Ralph Stearns of Grants Pass, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Stearns and children, Russell, Arvilla, Daryl and Lyle, of Corvallis, and the hosts, Captain and Mrs. F. C. Stearns.

Mrs. Otto J. Wilson entertained members of the Kensington club Thursday afternoon at her home. The rooms were attractively decorated with daffodils. Special guests were Mrs. John W. Harbison and Mrs. Asa Fisher. After a pleasurable afternoon of chatting and sewing, daffodil refreshments were served. Miss Margaret Wilson assisting the hostess in the serving.

For the next meeting Mrs. C. Elino Crandall will entertain the members of the club.

Mrs. Almira Hale was hostess at a delightful six-cover luncheon yesterday at 1 o'clock, with the Valentine motif used in the decorations. Narcissi centered the table.

One of the most entertaining and delightful parties of the month was that on Monday at the home of Mrs. John W. Harbison, 1845 South Commercial street, occasioned by the 12th birthday of Jane Harbison. Kathryn Sheldon, Marjory Webb and Jean Lunsford, together with the honor guest, invited the entire sixth grade of the Lincoln school to share the festivities of the anniversary day. A group of 52 guests was present. Pink candles were used on the attractive birthday cake.

The Salem Woman's club will meet in the club house today for the regular February business meeting.

The Junior King's Heralds will meet from 2 to 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. A. Lee, 1515 State street, for a Valentine party. The members are asked to bring in their thank offering at this time.

Mrs. J. T. Hunt entertained on the evening of February 12 in honor of her husband's birthday with a charmingly appointed 10-cover dinner at the Hunt home, 1137 Court street. Following the 6:30 o'clock dinner the evening was spent with music and games. Miss Vivian Whisler entertained with two vocal solos, after which group singing was enjoyed. The living room was attractively decorated with pink cyclamen and pussy willows.

The table was festive with red carnations and with red candles in crystal holders. Little red baskets were used for favors. The feature of the evening was the decorative birthday cake covered with the appropriate number of red candles.

Places were arranged for the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Culver, Mr. and Mrs. M. C.

many lands. There has never in all history, been a village, nation or country without its characteristic dances. America, however, is just beginning to realize the value of the dance—that it was the first art—the inspiration of the first music—the first sculpture. This realization is shown in the changed type of those who now make the study of the dance a life art. This is strikingly illustrated in the personnel of the Mansfield Dancers, three of whom are graduates of Smith college, two are writers, with published stories to their credit, one playwright and one sculptor, while all are of high intellectual attainment and all united in their love of the oldest and one of the most beautiful of all arts—the dance. The notes which accompany the program are by Margery Swett, the Chicago poet, who last year won the prize for the best poem submitted in their contest.

The Mansfield Dancers give but one performance here, on Feb. 15, at the Grand theater. Tickets are on sale by Mrs. Bertha Junk Darby.

Mr. and Mrs. Agnew Demarest and three children will be in Salem the latter part of next week, news which will be decided in (Continued on page 6)

The Expulsion of the British From the Old Northwest Is Seen in Film, "Vincennes"

The Third in the Series of "Chronicles of America" Now Showing at Liberty, Auspices of University Women.

AUDRED BUNCH

History became a glowing reality yesterday afternoon and evening at the Liberty theater when the third of a stirring series of authentic films—those of the Yale University Press—was enacted. "Vincennes" exhibited the same amazing fidelity to detail that made the two preceding films such memorable "screen spectacles."

"Vincennes" will forever and a day conjure in the minds of those who tensely watched the moves of foe against foe black, watery marshes, a rugged fort, rifles abutting through the chinks of the stronghold, almost impassable thickets, and then a little boy with a thatch of yellow hair who "hid in the alders," meeting only what he had meant to "escape."

The Indian scenes depict the bribed enemy force in their worst moods of treachery as well as in their primitive ways of peace-making. One's eyes, after the first step in the conquest has been taken, never leave the screen.

Patrick Henry's own wisdom was, in considering the case of those who hopefully cried, "a man can pick and choose his acres a way off yonder," that "they can't be held back, and we must make it safe for them."

It was in the old Jesuit mission house in mid winter of January, 1779, with its rude furnishings, that George Rodgers Clark determined to attempt the "impossible." "It can't be done," was the cry, and the audience, sorrowfully, was almost agreed, when they watched with restless suspense the maneuvers that followed.

Half-frozen, the riflemen in the expedition moved on and on, their reflections mirrored in the standing water as one glimpsed them through the trees. And then came the icy slough through which they waded, and through which their horses floundered, near to exhaustion, while Governor Hamilton leisurely quenched his appetite with an apple toddy before the fire!

But there was a change of scenes on a certain moonlight night in the February of 1779 which means—and incidentally, five new states to the union. Both this afternoon and evening this film will be shown again and in conjunction with it David Belasco's immortal Bachelor comedy, "Daddies!" Parents and children alike will not forget this occasion, and opportunity, in film-dom for many a day.

The Chronicles are being brought to Salem through the direct efforts of the American Association of University Women, with the Better Films committee, of which Mrs. A. M. Chapman is chairman, in charge of the varied detail work.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Jorgensen entertained on Thursday evening at one of the most beautifully appointed dinners of the week. Pussy willows and daffodils were used on the table, with favors and place cards in keeping with the Valentine season. Following the 7:30 o'clock dinner bridge was the diversion of the evening.

Covers were placed for Mrs. Winifred Pickering, Miss Helen North, Miss Alice Carrol, Mrs. Gus Bahr, and Mr. Roy Fitzgerald, all of Portland; Miss Gladys Mead of Oregon City; Miss Iris Jorgensen and the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Jorgensen.
