CHAPTER 286.

THE WAY CLAIRE FOSTER FIRST TRIED TO REPAY MADON.

Mrs. Barker kept her word. She carefully avoided any possible encounter with either Dicky or Claire Foster, and her willingness to aid me first expressed itself in meticulous attention to the supper table which she laid for the three of us.

"It will be all ready for you in five minutes," she said, when I had expressed my appreciation of the help she had promised, and I followed her out of her sitting-room into the dining-room with the assurance hugged to my soul that I should have no further trouble with her.

I retraced my steps to the front of the house where Dicky was standing.

"Oh, Dicky!" I said artlessly, making sure that my voice was audible on the veranda. "Will you join Claire and me in the dining-room in five minutes? Mrs. Barker has a most appetizing supper ready for us."

"I'll be there with sleighbells attached," he tossed back, with apparent innocence. But I, who know his every inflection, read in his voice his distaste for anything connected with Mrs. Barker. That he would be tractable, however, and keep his ruffled feelings to himself, I was sure, and I sped back to Claire Foster's bedroom with the gratified feeling that the

FIERY, ITCHY SKIN QUICKLY SOOTHED WITH SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is, or is rough with rash or pimples, or fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist. The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itchy or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up. A small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.—Adv.

No Gloomy Days

If you'll simply do this in the morning. All those dull days can be ended, those days of unfitness. You can live two days in one. Millions have proved that in this simple, pleasant way. On rising, drink a glass of water, hot or cold. That washes out the stomach, fits it for food. Add to that water a little Jad Salts. That makes an acid, effervescent drink. Jad Salts are made most arduous task was over.

"Will I do?" She had made good use of my absence. I saw that as soon as I opened the door in answer to her low-toned "come in." I had told her to look her prettiest and smartest, and my first glance at her told me that she had obeyed me literally.

She had toned down the rouge and powder which she had hurriedly slapped on at my first knock upon her door until no one but a very keen-eyed woman could have told that she had given any artificial aid to the complexion which, I knew, upon most occasions needed none. Her olive-green cloth gown embroidered in scarlet and with pipings and narrow girdele of the same royal shade spelled the last word in sartorial smartness.

"Will I do?" she asked, and there was in the question no self-consciousness, rather a note of humility foreign, indeed, to spoiled impervious Claire Foster.

"I should imagine you might," I smiled back, and then I caught sight of myself in the mirror, much the worse for wear because of my journey in the day coach of the slow train, and—woman-like—I visualized the contrast I would make in Dicky's eyes to Claire Foster's freshness.

"You haven't had a chance to freshen up since your journey," she replied so quickly that I wasn't sure whether or not she had seen my self-deprecatory glance. "Where is your bag?"

"In the taxi."

"But I have an extra comb and everything right here," she said capably. "Here, let me be your maid, please."

There was something so insistent, so pleading in her tone that I yielded promptly in spite of an instinctive repugnance I felt to accepting any favor at her hands. But I guessed that the girl was in a perfect agony of youthful remorse and anxiety to do anything she could for me, and I could not wound her as refusing her request certainly would do.

For the next three minutes I sat bewildered by the haste and efficiency with which she remedied the ravages of my journey. She whisked my suit coat from my back, shook it completely, and hung it upon a padded hanger, even while she tossed me a big towel with the injunction to tuck it around my neck and put my hat upon the bed.

Then with quick, deft fingers, she massaged my face with a cleansing cream, wiped it off, and dusted on a little rice powder. Then she removed the hairpins, shoot out my hair, gave it a hasty but thorough brushing, and twisted it up again. She stepped off a pace, surveying me critically.

"There, you are yourself again," she said. "Lucky your blouse is tan, so it doesn't show the dust as a white one would. And it is the duckiest thing! Now let me play Pullman porter and you're ready."

She applied a whisk broom vigorously to my skirt, gave a whisk or two to the coat, and held it out for me to slip on. And then, she looked at me critically, and put on my hat, adjusting it as carefully as if she were a millinery saleswoman.

"Now you may look," she said, and my glance into the mirror showed me myself almost miraculously transformed. I sent a thought wave of thankfulness to Lillian for having insisted that I wear my best trottur suit. Without being concealed, I knew from the acids of grape and lemon juices, plus lilia, etc. Watch the results. In one hour comes complete elimination. All the poisons, all the wastes depart. You become a new person, like a child of ten. All through a delicious drink. All by adding sparkle to your morning drink. Try this tomorrow. It will be a revelation. It will show you how to save the lost days, and ward off serious troubles. You will use it always when you know. All druggists supply Jad Salts.—Adv.

that I need no longer fear a contrast with Claire Foster, and the knowledge, in curious feminine fashion, softened my heart toward the girl who had so quickly and deftly aided me. (To be continued)

Editorials of the People

Suggestions to Legislature

Editor Statesman: I feel as though in justice to the state of Oregon and myself I should express my thoughts at this time. Our two greatest resources are timber and water-power and my mind runs back to my boyhood days in Pennsylvania where we had both these resources in abundance. The forests were simply immense and every mode of destruction was utilized but at that time logs were cut and hauled to the mill and sawed on halves and aside from labor good buildings could be erected very cheap, but eventually capitalists came and bought the timber for almost nothing, built spur tracks all through the mountains, brought their own labor crews and even shipped in their provisions and began the work of destruction. They had their own logging cars and instead of even sawing timber on the ground they shipped the logs to their mills at a distance and from there the lumber was transported elsewhere. In a few years the refuse became dry and in a brief time the fires changed what had been beautiful green mountains to a horrid sight of bare rocks not even covered with moss and lichen. I visited the same scene two decades later and found that lumber was imported and cost a fabulous price. Those fine old mountain springs had dried up. The country seemed parched. Their water-power was all in dry time and immense floods at other times, and what was left for remuneration to the people.

We are paying large salaries for the protection of our forests. Lumber is fast coming to an end in the United States and instead of retaining it, we in Oregon propose to turn over to the capitalists all our resources including the forests and let them cut, slash and utilize as they see fit and we protect them without an income tax or remuneration of any kind for 15 years. We know they can buy the bulk of timber very cheap, bring in their labor crews and in 15 years our forests will be denuded, the lumber shipped to all parts of the world, the saw mills dismantled and the multimillionaires that Oregon has made, probably residing in luxury elsewhere. And what benefit is our water-power when the timber is gone? The pretext is that it will bring in wealth and reduce taxes. This should be the case but it has proven the reverse. Our legislature should not model after states whose principal resources are white sand swamps, alligators and winter resorts for millionaires and nothing to purloin. A law of this kind might prove a serious calamity.

Western Fruit Boosted By Silverton Minister

SILVERTON, Ore., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Statesman).—Western fruit received a real sendoff at Duluth, Minn., so Rev. George Henriksen, who returned from the middle western state Thursday night, reports.

Rev. Mr. Henriksen went to Minneapolis, Minn., about two weeks ago to attend a ministerial conference held there. He was accompanied by John C. Goplerude, president of the Silverton Food Products company, a cooperative cannery at Silverton, Mr. Goplerude in turn was accompanied by two cans of Silverton strawberries. At the close of the conference the Rev. Mr. Henriksen claimed one of the cans and started for Duluth to visit a brother who is a Duluth business man. Nine fruit buyers for large concerns were gathered together. A number of dishes were numbered and into these were poured strawberries put up by various canning concerns. The nine men tasted these. Eight of the men pronounced the dish bearing the Silverton number far superior in flavor. In fact the buyers were so sincere in favoring the western berry that they immediately set about trying to get in touch with Mr. Goplerude before he should leave the east. Rev. Henriksen reports that he, Mr. Goplerude, was finally reached at Fargo, N. D., but that as he had not yet returned from there the immensity of the order which the Silverton company will receive is not yet known.

Who Is Temperamental?

Editor Statesman: In discussing the fish and game commission bill a few days since, Senator Roy Rittner expressed grave fears that a "temperamental" governor might appoint the wrong man on the commission, hence he wanted the commission to be placed under the board of control. He failed in his effort, so a discussion of that part of the subject is unimportant. The fish commission will remain under the appointing power of the governor. But the question of just what the senator means by temperamental might be of considerable interest. Senator Rittner is the man who, during his term of 30 days as acting governor, pardoned more criminals than Governor Pierce has done in over two years of office. They say he is temperamental because he, who introduced the state market agent bill two years ago, now tries to get it repealed because he did not get the man he wanted appointed. They say several things indicating a "temperament" in the system of our able senator from Umatilla.

There are some curious things in this legislature. Just a few days ago a member who was never known to keep his word if it paid him to break it, expressed fear that the governor might not keep a promise. And nearly every time any expression of this kind is uttered, a little searching finds a "bug under the chip." Senator Rittner should be authority on "temperamentalism" and no doubt is. CITIZEN.

Popular Play Goes on Barn-Storming Tour of District

"Always in Trouble," the laugh-making farce comedy, was presented by the Popcorn Parent-Teacher association at Pringle to a crowded and appreciative house Monday night for the benefit of a farmer whose home was burned to the ground recently.

The company presenting "Always in Trouble," which is directed by Perry Prescott Kelgelman of this city, is on a regular barn-storming tour of the small towns. The coming week the players will present the play in West Salem Tuesday night, Silverton Thursday night and Klamath Falls Friday night.

FORENSIC SEASON GETS UNDER WAY

Contests Are Slated for April 24; Tryouts Will Be Held Next Month

The forensic season for the three upper classes of Salem high school will begin April 5, when extemporaneous, impromptu and sight-reading contests will be held. The oratorical contest is set for April 15.

Last week the senior edition of the Clarion, with Alvin Barton as editor, was published. Ladelle Rhoten will edit the junior edition February 26 and Roscoe West the sophomore edit on March 12. Final forensic contests will be held in the high school auditorium April 24. Contestants are to be determined by tryouts to be held soon. These contests are supervised by the high school inter-class rivalry committee, which consists of Homer Richards, chairman; Arlie Anderson, senior representative; Ralph Wilson, junior representative, and Jack Spang, sophomore representative.

Marion County Court Seeks For Half-Holiday Saturday

County Clerk U. G. Boyer is anxious that the county court secure afternoon closing hours for Saturday, according to the petition which he is circulating among county officers. He intends to present it to the Marion county legislators to secure its passage at the legislature.

County Judge Hunt frowned upon the movement, it is said, because the banks of the city would not close. All of the banks in the city are favorable to the plan, except Ladd & Bush bank. No definite statement has been made by them due to the absence of A. N. Bush in California.

It is stated that the same bill will be introduced for the Clackamas county court. The law cannot regulate the closing hours of banks, but they can regulate the courts.

Put a mirror in your shop window and people will pause to reflect.

"RELIEF" IS AGAIN CENTER OF ATTACK

Ship Recently Crushed by Ice-Flow Tied up in Slough Near Salem

The steamship Relief, which has been the center of litigation since she was crushed by the winter ice-flow became the center of a new angle when two representatives of the insurance company in which the boat was insured arrived in the city.

The two attorneys are to institute a suit to collect the cost of raising the Relief from the river bottom. They represent the Globe & Rutgers Fire Insurance company of Portland, and state that a sum of $3,249.26 was expended in action.

It is charged that the owners of the boat, Charles F. Schaub, G. W. the boat, Charles F. Schaub, G. W. take the proper steps to protect the vessel and deliberately left her to the mercy of the ice. They are charged with neglect.

The vessel was insured for $20,000 and it is reported that the ship was worth no more than $5,000. The truth of this could not be ascertained, but the action of the insurance company to foreclose on the steamer comes as a surprise.

Action was started sometime ago when W. W. Mills filed a lien upon the Relief for work performed as a watchman. He claims that he was to be paid at the rate of $4 per day.

Special Meeting Called of Associated Charities Tues.

In order that the Associated Charities of Salem may secure sufficient funds to carry them along during the coming weeks, Mrs. John Carson has called a meeting of all interested in charity work to be held at the Salem Chamber of Commerce this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Salem organization of the charities had hoped to put on a circus at the Salem Armory to secure financial relief. After conference with the Cherrians, who were asked to sponsor it, a committee was appointed to look into the matter. By this afternoon the committee expects to make a report, and if the Cherrians do not advance plans, some other way will be taken to secure funds. At the present time the Armory is under contract and cannot be secured. This will be one way in which the circus will be postponed or delayed.

"Employment conditions still continue bad," stated Mrs. John Carson. "Even the women have a hard time finding work and we do not know how soon the situation will ease up. Food is one thing that is needed and ready cash is essential to secure this food and some step must be taken to meet the situation."

LEVENS NAMED SUCCESSOR TO GEO. CLEAVER

there has been no saloon for nine years. Records brought to our committee showed that $1500 of state funds were spent in high living and debauchery and in at least one instance money was spent for immoral purposes upon affidavits on file in Mr. Herwig's office after he had denied this to be the case. We have not yet had a detailed report.

"The prohibition department was used for political purposes and according to the files, instance after instance shows that the department sought more to defeat officers who had sworn to uphold the laws rather than to apprehend big rum runners. Washington county, which has the record for prohibition law enforcement in the state, never saw a state agent. Everything that Cleaver did was inspired by the governor and the anti-saloon league superintendent. Under these heads the department will prove as inefficient in the next two years as it did for the last two years. Records show that the anti-saloon league attempted to 'get' Dr. Linville, federal prohibition director and Senator McNary.

It is a stench in the nostrils and an odium to the state the way the prohibition department has been conducted and must be wiped from the state.

Recommendations, favored by Representative Lowman sought to place the matter of prohibition enforcement squarely before the sheriff and district attorneys, supplemented by a constabulary or "flying squadron," and under the direction of the attorney general. Representative Haribart spoke against such action. All recommendations were laid upon the table, similar action having been taken in the senate last week. The findings of the committee, which in the main held that the head of the prohibition department had proven unable to cope with the situation and censured both the governor and Mr. Herwig, was signed by all 10 members of the joint committee. The committee, however, could not agree upon recommendations. The vote against accepting the recommendations was 37 to 20.
