FRAT PLEDGES IN COMEDY CONTEST

Highly Refined Basketball Game Staged by Phi Kappa Pi Members

As a feature of the OAC—Willamette basketball game played here last night was the stunt put on between halves by the pledges of the Phi Kappa Pi fraternity. It was in the form of a highly refined basketball game in which the teams were judged on the grace and poise of the players and not the number of baskets converted.

The two teams entered the gym with the famous Swiss Navy march then at the toss up neither center was able to secure the ball for some time. At last one team converted a basket. Then a foul was committed for which both the

IDENTITY OF MAN NOW ESTABLISHED

Victim of Amnesia Said to be H. E. Williams; Authorities Make Search

The identity of the self-proclaimed amnesia victim who walked into the Salem police station at 12:30 Saturday night has been established as H. E. Williams, according to hospital authorities. Letters found on his person disclose this fact and that he was a lumber man from Astoria.

The man falls to remember his name, his age, his home, relatives, or friends. He does admit, however, that he has friends, but is unable to recall their names. Ever since an automobile accident last summer, declares the man, he has suffered from periodic lapses of memory.

For a while it was thought the man was shamming, but no apparent reason could be advanced for this. After two or three days' observation, it can be determined whether the man has disclosed all he knows, or is holding back, it was stated.

The man is apparently between the age of 60 and 65 years. When he walked into the police station he was wearing good clothes, and carried a suitcase and a grip. His clothes were clean and showed care, and the articles in the grips were carefully packed.

It was found that the man had stood on the downtown streets with his grips from 9 o'clock Saturday evening until about 12 o'clock.

Salem High to Mix With Independence Hi Tonight

Salem high school is scheduled to tangle with the Independence team tonight on the Independence floor in a return basketball match. The Salem team has been going strong and are standing in a favorable way to get the district championship, and with a strong possibility of annexing the state title, in the tournament to be staged here.

During the past week the Salem team has suffered because of the illness of Drager and Ellis, but new material has come to the fore and the team has not suffered as much as might have done. In the contest with West Linn last week, some of the new members of the Salem high team demonstrated their mettle and won favorable comment for their action.

OPERATIC TROUPE PLEASE SALEMITES

Lovers of comic opera are having an unusual opportunity to attend the offering of the Brandon Comic Opera company at the Grand theater, which is completing its three-day offerings in the city tonight.

Two performances were given Sunday, "The Mikado" in the afternoon and "Robin Hood" at night. Excellent voices and a well-selected cast were given a hearty welcome by those attending and the actors graciously consented to give repeated encores. Good houses greeted all of the performances.

Few of those present last night were aware that a Salem girl appeared in a stellar role, but such was the case. Little Dorothy Felker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Ray Felker, was "Arline," the daughter of Count Arline, who appeared in the prologue of "The Bohemian Girl." Little Miss Felker, who has had considerable stage experience, was attacked by a stag. After the rescue by Thaddeus, she was stolen by a band of gypsies. Twelve years have elapsed by the time the first act opens, and Arline is then portrayed by one of the members of the cast.

Tonight, the closing night, the Brandon Opera company will offer "The Spring Maid," an operetta in two acts.
