The public ought to be warned against salesmen for tory of the world the inaugural seedling walnut trees that are being sold at prices as high as $3 each in the Salem district-

Because a walnut tree is a long range proposition-It is for more than a life time; it is for unnumbered listen in, because any American

Further experimenting may develop other superior varieties of walnuts; but for the present there is only one best patriotism. variety for the Salem district, and that is the grafted Franquette. And it should be grafted on a black walnut root; preferably a California black walnut root. Then it will be immune from mushroom root rot.

Under very favorable conditions, with the right kind of soil, the grafted Franquette on a black root will begin to bear a few nuts at four or five years; and by the time it is 15 out over the country, a part of it years old it will bear 50 to 100 pounds of walnuts-

And it will increase its crop every year, indefinitely, as of course, paid for. Here is a it grows larger and its bearing surface increases—

For the walnut tree never grows old. It renews its youth every year.

The Franquette walnut grown on grafted trees in the Salem district is the best walnut so far developed in the whole wide world. It brings the highest price of any walnut grown, because it is a nut of fine appearance, and the quality of its meat is the best so far attained in the walnut industry.

HURRAH FOR ORPEN!

recently in the columns of the Sunday Pictorial that mod-Sir William Orpen, the distinguished English artist, said they ever were before. He says that all faces and all appearances are shaped through an attitude of mind-

As you think so you become. The average of beauty is rising; and it is rising because of a steady rise in virtue.

Hurrah for Orpen! His voice is a welcome sound in the fog of gloom that has been hanging over the world for a number of years, during which time we have heard of an increase of crime and general degradation, and might have been led to conclude that everybody and everything was growing more ugly and more drab.

But Sir William Orpen speaks as one having authority, and not as the scribes and pharisees, and he deserves the They had no doubts regarding their witness. They found Andrew's

"HOMESPUN FRIENDSHIP"

The poet or essayist hard pressed for a theme will find good one in "Ma" Ferguson's tribute to "homespun friendship." The simple grandeur of this manifestation impresses her, she says, when she looks into the toil-marked faces of the farmers who shake her gubernationial hand and wish her good luck.

It is a good piece of imagery—"homespun friendship." Of course, there is no more spinning of fabrics at home in these days of the factory, but homespun friendship has survived the spinning-wheel and the hand-loom and is as true, wholesome and hearty, as ever.

The farmer is your true democrat, the one to nod and smile and give a cordial "how-de-do" to you wherever met. He is a friendly man and his wife is a friendly woman and there is no chariness of address in their communications with their fellow-beings. While this springs largely from kindness of heart, it is also the reaction from the isolation in which days pass without sight of a soul save those of the household. So when a stranger comes along he is not a stranger, but a friend to whom one may pour out one's heart after a very brief conversation.

Not so the city man. One of his greatest bugbears is that somebody will steal five minutes of his precious time. In the street he will pass an acquaintance without a glance of recognition, fearful lest he be "held up" and a moment be lost. What he considers his necessarily alouf attitude results in an insulation which so discourages those who would be friendly and talkative that they draw in their antennae and go their way with the feeling that he is altogether too stiff and exclusive. Then, too, there are purse-proud men who walk the streets with what Emerson calls "upstart wealth's averted eye." Rich men are run after and importuned. They grow suspicious of advances, and with good cause, for enthusiastic expressions of friendship often are aimed, not at their hearts, but at their pocketbooks.

The countryman is honest. As a rule when it comes to giving an opinion, he may be depended upon for frankness of speech. The politician knows pretty definitely how the farmer will vote after he has sounded him. He can only guess how the city man will stamp his ballot.

Yes, homespun friendship, homespun honesty and homespun integrity are dependable. They are the backbone of the nation, without which it would be flabby, invertebrate and nation, without which it would be flabby, invertebrate and lacking in the vigor and virtue which spring from the soil. It is perhaps not necessary to explain to any reader of The Statesman that "Ma" Ferguson is the woman governor of Texas.

A GOOD MOVE

A movement is under foot for Americans to sing grand opera in English. It has been regrettable always that American singers have felt that they must use foreign languages to express themselves and thus deprive their audiences of much of the joy that comes from an understanding of grand opera. Carrying the tune is only a part of singing. The public has a right to know the words and enjoy them. This new movement is one that will have support all over the country and it will result in added financial returns in grand opera.

SHOULD LISTEN IN

Tomorrow President Coolidge will make his inaugural address, and for the first time in the hisaddress can be heard all over America, due to the marvelous development of radio. It is not only will be inspired by hearing the voice of his chief executive. There

TAX WAS NECESSARY The Statesman, of course, had no part in levying a tax on certain lines of tobacco, but it wants to commend the position of the Oregonian as being sound in insisting that there be no referendum on this. The tobacco tax was a necessity and it is an emergency tax. We have no doubt but what it would be taken off if the finances of the state warranted. Indirect taxes are growing because they are easier paid than direct taxes, and finally we will come to the point where there will be no direct taxes levied for state purposes. Several states have reached that point now, notably Califor-

THE witness of John Baptist bears fruit and in the section we are I to read today we find other witnesses added. His own disciples turn away from him to follow Jesus. John is happy to have them do so, for it was his mission to turn men to Jesus. Andrew and John (for no doubt it was the writer of the Gospel bearing his name) followed Jesus and abode with Him the few short hours remaining of the day. They came back to testify that they had found the Messiah. hand the reader would no doubt be glad to join in giving brother Simon and brought him to Jesus and he became a follower. Philip was found and asked to follow, too. He goes to get Nathanael and another disciple is won. The power of testimony is clearly shown in these instances. God is asking for witnesses today. There may be some secret disciples, but they must be very selfish if they are such, for He asks for confession, and delights in those who own
