SOME ONE STILL CARES

If you live in Salem, you have probably noticed the beautiful wreath at the foot of the soldier monument in the court house square-

Placed there by some one who has chosen to be unknown. The American War Mothers, who sponsored the erection of the monument, appreciate this-

And it shows that some one still cares for the boys who made and offered to make the supreme sacrifice in the World war; still has a thrill such as gripped everyone in the days when the soldier boys marched away.

In this connection, be it known that the Salem War Mothers are holding a rummage sale in the U.S. Bank building, in the room formerly occupied by the Johnson Clothing store. The object is to raise money to endow hospital beds for service men and women. If you have rummage, phone any War Mother, and it will be called for. Convenient numbers are 95, 163 and 1795W; but any War Mother will be glad to respond.

LAURA M. PIERCE

A close friend of Laura M. Pierce said at her funeral yesterday that he had never heard her utter an unkind word of man or woman; and that he believed she harbored no unkind thoughts concerning any human being-

And that was a great tribute. Can you think of a better pected to have for that doughty mental reservation that I need not

She was in the grip of the fatal disease that sapped her life for six years. For the past two years she was much weakened and towards the last was a mere shadow of the robust woman she had been-

But she bore up bravely and did her part cheerfully in trate physician whom Mrs. Barker managing and planning the affairs of her home. She planned had shut into her root cellar when the household affairs even up to Saturday evening, a few hours before passing peacefully to the land beyond the stars, at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. The wing of the angel of death touched her cheek so gently that the waiting members of her family scarcely realized the moment that for her divided time from eternity-

And she was ready. She knew her time of departure was at hand, and she had no protest. She had fought a good fight, and she had no misgivings.

She was concerned for the good and the happiness of her loved ones; her husband and son and four daughters and the other half orphaned daughter of her sister, whom she brought up as her very own.

Mrs. Pierce was a good wife and mother; a splendid home builder; modest, retiring; womanly; giving herself to the full in service, demanding nothing for herself.

She was a woman of culture as well as kindness, and she would have made a splendid impression as the first lady of Oregon in official circles had she been favored with her for- to him. mer good health.

The cause of her passing was a loss to the whole public. Having no fault to find with her kind, she was loved by all who knew her well, and would have been loved by the multitude.

said heartily, "but I can never forget your kindness."

"Don't burden your memory too much," she advised dryly, and I flushed a bit with the realization that she had gauged the perfunctoriness of the phrase. There was real kindliness and liking, however, in both her hand-clasp and her hearty "good-by," and I went down the steps with the feeling that she would do her best to show Dr. Pettit the error of his ways. Harry Underwood stood like a sentinel on the veranda, and I noted that he had planned his station so that no one could see him from any possible window. He spoke in tones loud enough for Mrs. Barker to hear as I came up

"Is it here that we are to wait for the motor, Madame?" he said with a most impressive air, adding out of the corner of his mouth: "Everything jake?"

of Jesus and His replies to their criticisms. The helpless man at the pool of Bethesda furnished an excuse for the opposition, because he was healed on the Sabbath. He represents the friendless, helpless ones. These always called forth the pity of our Lord. The charge against him was that he carried his bed on the Sabbath. Jesus replied that "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath." This chapter might also be called the "witness" chapter, for Jesus points out five witnesses (cf verses 33, 36, 37, 39 and 46). These witnesses are (1) to the divinity of Christ by the Father; (2) to the proofs of His divinity by John Baptist; (3) to the fact of His Sonship by the Father; (4) to the witness of the Scriptures; (5) to the witness of Moses. His enemies sought to kill Him because of His good deed (cf verse 18).

"Sir, I have no man . . . . to put me in the pool."

"Rise, take up thy bed and walk."

"Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eterna life; and these are they which bear witness of Me.'
