Face Serious Charge

J. H. Tanzer was placed in the county jail yesterday in lieu of $500 bail, which he was unable to raise at a late hour. Early yesterday morning Tanzer, who lives at 1930 West Nob Hill, was arrested by the police and charged with molesting a young woman. It is alleged that Tanzer and the young woman, who were not acquainted, left the street car together and that he walked with her a short ways and then molested her. The young woman gave a description of the man to the police and he was soon under ### arrest. Tanzer is a married man and is alleged to have been under the influence of a concoction of lemon extract. Tanzer will most likely face an examination as to his sanity, due to the fact that his father was committed to the asylum under like circumstances.

ME-OWS From The CAMPUS CAT

The following from Carrie, the Campus Cat, came in yesterday's mail.

"I am up at Ward-Belmont,

visiting a college friend, Betty, '26, a lovely girl, and so innocent! A young Georgia sophomore, David Dumbell, came with his car to a dance, but Betty couldn't go because it was her roommate's turn to wear their dress!

"Well, the next evening he took her out for a drive... Me, too, in the back seat!

"At first she called him 'Mister

Dumbell," and all he could talk about was the car. He said it had very low gas consumption, and didn't think it was as serious as that. Then David acted more human and asked Betty how she was getting on in her studies, and she said she wasn't getting on... just by. The boy was warning up by now.

"How fast is the car going?"

asked Betty. "Why, we're only making 20 miles an hour," David replied. "I suppose it only seems that way in comparison with you!" said Betty, snappily.

Suddenly the car stopped.

"The engine is stalled. I don't know what to do," muttered David.

"Then I am the first girl you ever took motoring?" flashed Betty. "She's an innocent girl, dear Editor, she certainly is... Me-ow... me-ow."

PEACE ON EARTH!

(Recently we published "Contentment," or "I'm Glad I Am a Man," and Oh! How the women folks responded! We maintained an open forum, and we gave the women the floor, Miss Marion Harriman writing an able answer in "I'm Glad I Am a Woman." And how the men folks responded!

Mr. Baxter is willing to call it "quits," as is Miss Harriman. Today we publish a bid for peace, to-morrow Miss Harriman's, to which we will append our own unprejudiced judgment!—EDITOR.)

CONTENTMENT

Whenever I see women meet And kiss each other on the street, I'm glad I am a man.

When I see lingerie displayed, Those georgette things in every shade, With lace medallions overlaid, I'm glad I am a man!

When I see women powder up, Or kiss a homely poodle pup, I'm glad I am a man, A doodad here, a stick-up there, In combinations wild and rare, I'm glad I am a man!

When on the street I see them crawl In shoes two sizes much too small, I'm glad I am a man, When I note all they have to show, (Displayed, or hinted at, you know), In order to attract a beau, I'm glad I am a man!

THE FLAG OF TRUCE By William M. Baxter

I wrote some verse not long ago To let the population know I'm glad I am a man, Whew! How some women lost their goat!

Six hundred to me wrote; Still, folks, I'd like to have you note I'm glad I am a man!

The way those girls went after me Was good for sore eyes; yet, by gee! I'm glad I am a man.

Miss Harriman gave me some whacks; Her pungent pen no vigor lacks, So I say: "Let's inter the axe." I cannot fight with women.

I've thought the situation o'er; This world would be an awful bore If it weren't for the women. To truthfulness I'd be remiss, Did I deny the force of this, That girls are mighty nice to kiss! I'm glad that there are women!

Hard To Convince Maxine: "Oh, Harold, do you really love me?" Harold: "Love you? What do you think I've been doing—setting-up exercises?"

Paving The Way Duncan: "What gives you the idea that your wife is figuring on a new Easter outfit?" Clark: "She kept two appointments with me, without being late!"

—Rufe O'Leary.

No man ever has as good a time away from home as his wife imagines he has.
