TWO-STORY KENWOOD HOME

THE planning of a small home is even more difficult than a larger one. To plan a small home containing most of the desirable features without making it appear cluttered up, is work of an expert.

In Kenwood you will find most of the features of a modern complete home. The dining kitchen is large enough to accommodate the average family. If the occasion demands, the dining table may be placed in the living room, as this room is amply large, being 11' 3"x19', with fireplace at one end.

The entry at the front gives privacy to the interior. There are two bedrooms and bath at the rear, with closets and linen case.

The second floor contains two good sleeping rooms, toilet and sewing room. A half basement is provided.

Over $40,000 Issued During Week; Total for Month Is Over $150,000

Another week has passed and building permits are still being issued in vast quantities, the total for the month so far exceeding $150,000, all of which, with one or two minor exceptions, are for new residences. During the week 14 permits were issued by the city recorder, amounting to $40,400. One $500 permit was for a small garage and one for $6000 for an addition to Hunt Brothers cannery. The remainder were for new dwellings, averaging between $3000 and $3200.

BURGLARS FAIL TO MAKE A GET-AWAY

Willard Battery Although Dependable, Dead Without Battery Acid

Burglar proof storage batteries! Joe Williams, Willard battery dealer here feels he can make that claim for his stock, following the capture of four bank bandits who stole a Willard battery, which proved to be their undoing.

The quartet drove into Carson City, Nevada, and under the guise of tourists, put at the public camping grounds to get "the lay of land." While there they discovered their battery was in bad condition.

The theft of a battery was included in their plan to rob the Carson City bank. Two of the four engaged the local Willard dealer in the front of his shop while the other two went around to the back of the station and appropriated a new battery from the dealer's stock shelves.

One was left to install the battery in the car which stood in front of the bank while the others were working inside, incidentally he was to act as lookout. The battery was connected. The vaults were entered and rifled. A "get-away" was in order.

But the robbers failed to "get." They were astounded to find they could not start their motor. The delay and confusion caused by this discovery resulted in their being caught redhanded. One of the quartet later explained that they stole the Willard because they thought it the most dependable battery on the market and in making their getaway, "dependability was what they wanted nothing else but." "They were right in their faith in Willard batteries," explains Williams, "but they happened to pick the wrong kind of a Willard for their purpose." "The battery they took was one of the new Charge-A-Dry Willlards which has many advantages not found in other batteries. That is, advantages for honest folks who pay for their batteries instead of stealing them. This battery is absolutely dead, although fully charged, until battery acid is poured into the cells. This is done at the time of sale to insure the buyer getting the full life of the battery, and is possible only with Willards. If the robbers had filled the battery when they took it, it would have been ready at once to start their car as the acid would have released the pent up charge.

Many at Convention: City Entertains Workers

The Sunday school convention which was held at Woodburn the past week proved to be the best ever held. The following officers were elected: President, Fred de Vries; vice president, Glen McClellan; secretary-treasurer, Alice Jaquet; administrative superintendent, Mrs. P. L. Blackerby; Young People's division superintendent, Mrs. Fern Wells Dougherty; children's division superintendent, Mrs. H. F. Shanks. B. J. Kimber was elected a member of the staff and put in charge of the publicity.

The following resolutions were adopted and ordered printed in the Salem Statesman: "Whereas the Marion County Sunday School Council of Religious education in session at the Methodist church in Woodburn, has been a success due to the efforts of the county officers and the good people of Woodburn; therefore "Be it resolved: That our hearty thanks be extended to the church officers for the use of their church and to Mrs. J. F. Kimers and her committee of the various churches for their splendid co-operation.

"We especially wish to commend the work being done in the Bethel community, in week day religious education, under the leadership of Rev. Achor, Mrs. Hughes, and Mrs. Seeley. It is a significant fact that this is the only work of this kind being done in Marion county.

"We also wish to thank Mr. H. C. Leavenworth for the splendid address on the subject of Week Day Bible school.

"Be it further resolved that we extend to the state workers, Mrs. Jean M. Johnson, Rev. F. M. Jansky, and Rev. W. van Nuy, our sincere appreciation for their untiring efforts in helping our county with its task.

"And to our county president, Mr. Fred deVries, we extend our special thanks for his honest and consistent efforts to keep Marion county organized and working."

"And that we further resolve to get behind our county president in the task of organization, program, and finance.

"That a copy of these minutes go to the secretary book, and a copy be published in the Salem Statesman."

"Germany has war plans." The very ideal. And all the other nations so disarmed and innocent!

WALL ST. TRICKSTERS FOREVER ON SEARCH FOR NEW VICTIMS

NEW YORK, March 28.—The financial underworld which tinges Wall street steadily hits upon new methods to keep up with the times and ahead of the law. Its jargon is elastic, impromptu and bizarre.

For example, swindlers who fleece the public through sales of fake stocks work by telephone. In what is called a boiler room, telephone salesmen are said to "hook the suckers." Dynamiters, so-called, "build up" the victims and hoodwink them into switching from standard securities, first held out as bait to attract investment, to worthless stocks, which the conspirators are in business to unload.

Gone is the "gold brick," gone the bunco man who struck up acquaintance with prosperous visitors from the interior at metropolitan railway depots in the '90s. The get-rich-quick man of today has imagination. Avoiding the mails as much as possible, he strikes over the telephone and telegraph, often to bring down quarry as much as several states away.

These swindlers operate from offices that usually are obscure, sometimes merely desk room, so customers will find telephone calls hard to trace. In the larger plants there often is a battery of as many as eight telephones. This is the boiler room, the term being derived from the practice of creating an atmosphere of bustling activity to impress inquisitive suckers who cannot be kept away.

The hustle is not wholly fictitious, the Better Business bureau investigators have found. Hear in, hour out, salesmen with good voices canvass by wire a list of names selected either from a secret "sucker's list" or the telephone directory.

They hook their man by offering to let him buy some active standard stock guaranteed to advance, on a partial-payment plan. He can sell out at the rise and take a profit perhaps equal to as much as he has paid in. The money is duly received, but the stock is never bought.

When the stock goes up and the customers has a substantial paper profit to his credit, the dynamiter steps in to give him high-pressure treatment.

"Bully!" comes a smooth, congratulatory voice over the telephone. "Didn't we tell you? See what a concern like ours can do for you?"

A Thing of Beauty Must Be Structurally Sound

Above is shown the First Prize design of a home built of common brick in our recent contest. A brick home remains beautiful for many years after a frame building would fall into decay. It is structurally sound and the saving in painting, repairs and depreciation amounts to many times the slight extra cost of building with brick.
