Walnut plantings in Oregon districts are determined by two things—depth, drainage, and fertility of the soil, and the elevation. They require a soil at least five or six feet deep, with no water table or impervious soil layers through which the roots cannot penetrate. Good drainage is necessary. Standing water during the winter, or at any time is almost fatal to root development.

The industrial center of the United States is rapidly gravitating to Oregon because of the marvelously favorable conditions and prodigality of resources. World markets are opening before us like the first pink of an opening rosebud. Every dollar spent for "OREGON QUALITY" products stimulates it into full and refulgent bloom.

ART OF SERVING KEY TO SUCCESS
A service station at "The parting-of-the-ways" occupies a location which makes it especially welcome to the travelling public. This is the position occupied by the Robinson Service Station on the Pacific Highway just south of Salem.
Mr. Robinson not only found an especially valuable location but the location secured an especially valuable man when he located there.
Service means considerably more than just carrying a stock of gas, oil and accessories. It includes, from the standpoint of Mr. Robinson, the personal element injected into the entire transaction by the management. This is the element which brings the customer back for further service and builds up a permanent and prosperous business for the proprietor who operates from that viewpoint.

Autoists will find this station at the "parting-of-the-ways" fills the highest ideal of service.
