HENRY FORD DOING IMPOSSIBLE FLAX FEATS

"The important thing about that flax you have just seen is that it is a machine product. We put about 800 acres here into flax. We plowed and prepared the ground by machinery, we sowed by machinery, we harvested by machinery, we dried and threshed it by machinery, and finally took out the fiber by machinery. That has never been successfully accomplished before."

"Our plant is on a commercial scale; we now know that with cotton selling above 20 cents a pound it will be cheaper for us to use linen than cotton, and we HAVE ALREADY ORDERED the necessary spinning and weaving machinery. In a little while we shall be making linen for our own uses. We shall control from field to fabric. As we go forward with this work the costs will decrease and we shall probably learn new and better ways of doing the work; but right now at the outset our figures show us that it is more profitable for us to use linen than cotton in much of our work."

RESUE THE WILD FLOWERS

Persons who would mourn over the prospects of the loss of the wild flowers from the woods and roadsides, often thoughtlessly aid in their utter destruction. Everywhere the delicate blossoms of the wild plants and shrubs, which dot the landscape with winsome colors, are decreasing year after year and unless something is done to check their destruction they will soon be exterminated. Already many varieties, once common, have entirely disappeared.

five years. In this same time the Prudential has loaned $205,609,130.20 on farm mortgages. The cause of this increase of loans by the insurance companies is due to their somewhat lower interest charge and to the economic conditions calling for more mortgages. The lower rate is desirable but fair profit on the farmer's produce, in order that he may pay off the mortgage now existing or that he may make a comfortable financial showing and taboo future mortgages, is what he most needs—and to which he is entitled for honest-to-goodness intelligent effort.

LENTEN TALKS THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST JOHN

by Rev. ERNEST H. SHANKS, Pastor of the First Baptist Church

John 19:38-42. "The Entombment." Joseph of Arimathea asks from Pilate the Body of Jesus. Nicodemus joins in the request. The Body taken from the Cross. It is laid in Joseph's tomb. Key: "The Garden." Memory verses: 38, 39, 40, 41.

"THE DIVINE TRAGEDY" is over. The sun that had refused to shine for more than three hours, during which time every star was blotted out and the moon gave forth no light, now bursts forth into sudden mid-afternoon brightness. Jesus is dead. Joseph and Nicodemus, both of them members of the Sanhedrin that condemned Jesus to death, but both of whom had no part in that mock trial and condemnation, came to Pilate and asked for the body of their Master. Many leaders of the Jews did believe in Him. Pilate had been strangely shaken over the events. Superstition and dread filled his soul. He readily gave permission, and the body was tenderly taken from the cross, wrapped in pure linen and laid in Joseph's new tomb. Then followed a night, a day and another night of deep darkness. Spiritual and mental darkness. It looked as if the powers of hell had triumphed. Death was victor. The disciples were disappointed. They understood not what Jesus had told them about the resurrection. How often the darkest night is just before the dawn.

He came therefore, and took the body of Jesus. Nicodemus, which at first came to Jesus by night, brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes. They took the body of Jesus, and wound it in linen clothes with the spices. In the place where He was crucified there was a garden . . . and a new tomb . . . there laid they Jesus.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adèle Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE Copyright by Newspaper Feature Service CHAPTER 430 THE PROMISE MADGE MADE MRS. DURKEE. "Hush!" I made the syllable imperative, and little Mrs. Durkee, with a frightened glance at the computers near us, some of whom were looking at us curiously, obeyed me with a pitiful little gulp. "Come over here," I guided her to a comparatively isolated bench in the Long Island waiting-room, and sat down beside her.

Are You Planning to Borrow?

There are two main points to consider when borrowing money. First, are repayment privileges so arranged as to be suited to your requirements? Secondly, is the interest cost the lowest that can be obtained? Here at Hawkins & Roberts, you can secure a mortgage loan which can be paid back in predetermined amounts over a period of 142 or 200 months. Moreover, the cost for the use of the money borrowed is remarkably low.

ed over her fears. The color came back to her face, and she gave the light laugh which is one of her most charming little ways. "Just save your fears for yourself," she said. "I am not worrying over anything happening to me, it's what may come to you that's turning my hair white even with my new guaranteed touching up." She laughed again as joyously as if she were not still shaking inwardly with terror. "You know very well that it isn't little insignificant me who is causing those devils any trouble. They'll never bother their heads about whether I go home or anywhere else. It's you they're watching, and you won't take a single bit of care of yourself."

Madge is Uneasy. "Yes, I will," I promised with conviction in my voice. "The minute you're on that train I'll promise to go straight to the apartment and—nobody possibly can have any idea where we are—we didn't know ourselves we were going there six hours before we went there. And I shan't stir from it again alone. Will that satisfy you?"

"I would if I didn't know you so well," she said whimsically. "There'll something turn up you'll think it's your duty to do, and then your promise can go hang." "Don't you slander me like that," I retorted. "Shall I get your ticket?" "I have it right here." She indicated her pretty purse. "And why do you wait for that train to go? You only make me nervous." "I won't wait to see it actually moving," I said. "I'll just go with you down the steps. I've got a family ticket with me, so I can get past the ticket-man, and when you're safely in the car I'll come back. I think we'd better get in the line now. I can see the crowd forming."

"It isn't necessary for you to go with me," she protested, but I sensed a new and strange fragility in my little friend, something not to be disguised by her laugh, and silenced her preemptorily. "You ought to know by this time what a wilful woman I am," I said smiling but resolute, "so don't waste time objecting. The earlier I get you into the train the earlier I can start for the apartment."

"You know that's the only way to manage me," she said shrewdly, but she rose obediently, and slipping a supporting hand under her elbow I walked with her through the ticket gate, and a minute or two later saw her safely ensconced in the train. "You'll let me know how things are," she said, clinging to me. "Of course," I promised. "And I do wish you'd come to see me, Madge," she quavered. "You don't know how I've missed you since you moved away. I—I get terribly lonesome for you, and I just can't abide those upstairs of neighbors who bought your house. The woman's perfectly impossible, but then—honestly—I suppose I'm not as nice to her as I might be. I'm getting awfully crabbed lately, Madge, I—I—guess I must be getting old."
