

STAYTON WOMAN CALLED BY DEATH

Funeral Services Are Held on Monday; Jordan Woman is Also Dead

STAYTON, Ore., April 15.—Mrs. S. G. Crabtree passed away at her home on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, after an illness of three weeks. Deceased was 73 years and 4 months of age, and was the mother of 5 children: M. J. of Mehama and J. K. of Hood River; Everett Crabtree, Mrs. Nora Taylor and Mrs. Grace Holford of Stayton, also three step-children, W. W. Crabtree of Stayton, T. C. Crabtree and Mrs. Mary Townsend of Salem, all of whom survive her. She also leaves a brother, A. D. Gardner of Stayton, and two sisters, Mrs. J. R. Gardner of Stayton and a sister in Albany. Funeral services were held from the Christian church of which she has long been a member, Monday afternoon, and the remains laid beside those of her husband, who passed on several years ago. The many beautiful floral tributes gave silent but eloquent testimony of the high esteem in which she was held by the people among whom she has lived for so many years.

G. H. Ray, Mrs. Roxie Shank, and other relatives from the Mt. Pleasant neighborhood in Linn county, passed through Stayton early Easter morning enroute to Salem where they spent the day with Mrs. Lillie Nadstaneck, who is a sister of Mr. Ray and Mrs. Shank. A double celebration of the day was a feature, it being the birthday of Mrs. Nadstaneck, as well as Easter day. During the afternoon the party drove out on the route followed by the Passover day caravan, which was added pleasure.

Henry J. Parker came over to Stayton Saturday and was shaking hands with old friends about town. Mr. Parker was a pioneer resident of this vicinity, being raised on a donation land claim near Sublimity and for a number of years served as stage driver carrying the mail between Turner and Mehama, which at that time was the end of the mail route. It is needless to say he notes many changes along the old stage route.

To show their appreciation to the townspeople and patrons of the school, the student body gave a two hours free entertainment in the school auditorium Friday night. The house was packed, with standing room at a premium. Many stood up during the entire program. The program, in the form of a High Jenks, was good, and each number was well rendered by the pupils, showing much careful training.

E. W. Swallow moved his family and household effects to Turner on Saturday, where they will reside. Mr. Swallow has employment in the Salem woolen mills, and the move will bring her and the family nearer together. Mrs. Swallow was an active member in church work and will be missed by the membership.

T. C. Crabtree of Salem, and his sister, Mrs. Ed Townsend also of Salem, were here several days during last week assisting in the care of their mother, Mrs. S. G. Crabtree, during her serious illness. Mr. Crabtree and Mrs. Townsend are both former residents of Stayton.

Otto Wilson, a prominent automobile dealer of Salem, was in Stayton during last week demonstrating one of the new models for which he is agent.

Mrs. Evalyn Shelton whose death occurred at her home in Jordan on Thursday of last week, was the grandmother of W. W. Crabtree of Stayton. Mrs. Shelton was one of Linn county's earliest pioneers and lacked but a few months of being 99 years of age. Mr. Crabtree and family and other Stayton friends attended the funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rauscher of Sublimity were among those from out of town who were trading one day the latter part of the week. Mrs. Rauscher says growing things on the farm are responding to the warm weather in a very satisfactory manner.

Several exceptionally heavy showers of rain visited Stayton Saturday during the afternoon, which flooded the gutters and literally drove traffic off the streets for the time being, and seriously interfered with the ball game, which was in progress on the home diamond.

Mrs. C. H. Brewer was indisposed several days last week, suffering with a light attack of the flu.

John H. Mielki, wife and daughter, Cecelia, arrived home Friday from a two months auto tour through California. They enjoyed a wonderful scenic trip, and are kept busy telling their friends of the pleasures enjoyed while away.

W. B. Allis who operates a truck line between Stayton and Gates has been confined to his bed for the past two weeks with a serious attack of flu which has been prevalent among Stayton people for the past month.

H. J. Marking, manager for the Adams Hardware company store has been nursing a badly swollen face lately, on account of an attack of neuralgia.

The women of the Catholic church held a cooked food sale Saturday which netted them a neat sum. The proceeds are to be used for the benefit of the church.

James Mielki, a student at OAC and a college chum, came over from Corvallis Friday evening spending the Easter vacation with the Mielki family here.

John Giebler, a farmer out on Stayton route 2, spent a few hours visiting with friends here Saturday.

RAIN WELCOME FRUITMEN SAY

Blossoms Sufficiently Set to Prevent Any Damages Being Done Orchards

Rain verging on a deluge and bringing thousands of dollars of benefit to the district, fell between 2 and 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Curls ran full and overflowing in several sections of the city but the rain did not continue long enough to do any damage.

Fruitmen believe that the blossoms have sufficiently set to prevent any damage from the down-pour and as long as the rain was warm and not cold benefits are anticipated. A week of cold, rainy weather at this time would prove very harmful to the fruit crop.

Spring grains, small fruits and other similar crops will receive enormous benefits from the moisture. Farmers in general have their ground worked and expect favorable effects throughout the growing season.

The rain Wednesday and Tuesday night was not local but spread over the entire state. Reports from the Klamath country indicate that stockmen will be greatly benefited by the moisture as water holes have been filled on the ranges. Eugene and Roseburg report heavy warm rains while eastern Oregon wheat farmers and ranchers were relieved at the rain as the range grass has been suffering from lack of moisture.

The rain here, as in other places was accompanied by a few claps of thunder. Light electrical and thunder storms were reported from other cities reporting rain.

islands and before the attack on Oahu is made.

In the fleet that ploughed through the Pacific tonight were 27 vessels of all classes.

With several additions which will bring to 140 the total strength of the "blue" fleet and the 30 vessels of the "black" or "enemy" forces, there will be an aggregation of 170 vessels of war in Hawaiian waters at one time prior to the departure of 55 of these ships for the trip to Australia.

HONOLULU, April 15.—Orders were issued here today for mobilization Saturday of the Hawaiian national guard for participation in the coming joint army-navy maneuvers. While no secret was made of the mobilization, army headquarters refused to divulge what would be done with the guard, saying that all maneuvers plans were being kept secret. The guard will take part in defense of the islands against the attacking United States grand fleet.

the details of the tragedy, she mourned as she was led away. "Oh, she couldn't do it! She couldn't do it!"

The girl was taken away and Mrs. Cunningham plunged at once into the complete history of the poison case.

The son Mrs. Cunningham said she did not poison Harry. His was one of the two bodies of her children exhumed a few days ago and Dr. William D. McNally of Chicago, coroner's chemist, said that he had found poison in the viscera of this body as well as in that of the other body examined.

Mrs. Cunningham said that she spread the poison in the form of arsenic on bread and butter that she gave to members of her family and each time she did so, she ate some of it herself. She tried to explain her motive for poisoning only one child at a time as follows:

"Something seemed to draw in my head and tell me I had to get rid of them. I thought that I was going to die and wanted to take them with me. I only poisoned ones I loved the best and I poisoned the ones I liked the best in turn because I wanted them with me."

Her daughter told her excitedly not to talk and that good lawyers would be obtained to defend her but Mrs. Cunningham replied angrily:

"I don't want good lawyers. I'll feel better after I tell them about it."

The daughter was asked if she wanted to hear what her mother had to say.

"Yes, I want to hear what you are making her say," the girl screamed at Sheriff Strong.

"We are not making her say anything. She has volunteered to tell us her story," the sheriff told the girl and the mother assented.

times and he employs no outside means.

His experiments are baffling in the extreme and even college professors, versed in the higher sciences, have confessed themselves baffled at the mysterious power which enables this man to answer questions after they have been written and placed on a table before the eyes of those who wrote them.

There is not a single objectionable feature about his act and he especially invites those who are skeptical to submit their questions to him or apply any reasonable test of his power.

Murdock has agreed to drive a car through the streets of Salem while blindfolded. The drive will be staged Tuesday noon and stops will be made at various business houses.

The complete route and stops will be published in Sunday's Statesman.

Murdock has chosen the Moon car to drive. Arrangements for the drive has been made with Mr. Fred Delano of the Salem Automobile company, who recently added this car to their lines. Frank Bligh, manager of the flight theater, shows his confidence in Murdock by guaranteeing to stand for all damages to the car. See Sunday's Statesman for complete details of the blindfolded drive.

payments Mr. Sanson stated that the calls would be made as follows:

Ten per cent on June 1, 20 per August 1, 25 per cent on October 1, and 25 per cent on February 1, 1926.

The deep interest shown by the committees last night demonstrated the determination existing to see the proposition to a finish. The committee men plan to stick to their guns.

Mr. Sanson left for Portland last night, where he is to address a popular mass meeting, which several local business men and others are planning to attend.

Mrs. G. Klorfein exhibited samples of linen which she has made with her own hands some 15 years ago. The cloth was in good shape and from its appearance would be good for service the coming fifteen years. She explained how she had tended the flax in the field, pulled it and prepared it for spinning. The cloth was made during the winter evenings on looms.

BALLADE OF A POPULAR MAN
By H. T. Harrison
When I am importuned to dine 'Tis not for my society That gentlemen and ladies pine. I have no verbal brilliancy; I am not quick with repartee; I tell no witty anecdote; But explain the mystery— I'm the owner of a dinner coat!

There is a flapper, quite divine, Who loves to go about with me Though dancing never was my line. I never had the dancing bee. To state the matter truthfully She likes my style; she's made a note

That I'm presentable, you see; I'm the owner of a dinner coat!

A heap of invitations fine Comes flooding in right merrily And every day I must decline. No less, at any time, than three; I make my choice fastidiously. It is to this fact that I vote My growing popularity— I'm owner of a dinner coat!

Envy
Young men, if you would grow to be A very welcome guest, just quote These words of mine; say quietly, "I'm owner of a dinner coat!"

Sorely Needed
Hammons: "What is going to be the next great medical discovery?"
Prof. Brusque: "Isolating the cross word bacillus and making a serum for the plague."

Fore-sight
One cold night recently little Mary was saying her prayers. As she was taking so much time her mother said: "Hurry up, Mary and get in bed."
"Wait, Mother," replied Mary, "I'm saying them for tomorrow night, too."

April Showers
Doggone these April showers! That bring the Maytime flowers; To me they mean just hours Of wasted time from sort. If I have, with sweet Janice, A promise to play tennis, As sure as my name's Dennis, There is a middy court.

At ball games we are cheated; No sooner are we seated Than to rain checks we're treated And told to come again. My disposition soured At thoughts of springtime showers;

I wish the weather powers Would cut out April rain. H. D. Dennis.
