SEVENTY-FIFTH YEAR

SALEM, OREGON, SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 2, 1925

PRICE FIVE CENTS

TWO THEATRES WILL RISE IN SINGLE BLOCK

Guthrie and Bligh Announce Plans for Commodious Show House at State and High Streets

SEATING CAPACITY IS DOUBLE OTHER HOUSE

Fine Structures Designed to Seat 1500 and 1250 Persons Respectively

Salem is to have two new theaters, and both of them are to be bigger, finer and more up to date than any theater now in this city.

George B. Guthrie, who is the man behind the Oregon, the Grand and the Liberty theaters in Salem, some months ago acquired the lot on the east side of South High street just back of the Salem hotel, and across the street from the New Salem hotel.

This is enough ground floor space to give opportunity for a roomy theater, and one very conveniently located. Fine and distinctive. It is the intention of Mr. Guthrie to give Salem a theater that will be distinctive; one that will not be just like any other theater.

He expects to build the new theater so that it will seat 1400 to 1500 people, and at the same time double the number that is now accommodated by the Grand or the Oregon here.

Frank Bligh will also build a new theater. It will front on State street, east of the Salem hotel property. It will occupy the space now occupied by the Buzz shop and the buildings next to the alley.

Mr. Bligh has been developing plans for this theater for a long time. He has not entirely settled on all the details; nor the time when work will start.

SOVIET PARADE IS CARRIED ON

Bolshevik Banners Flaunted During Demonstration; Hundreds Take Part

MOSCOW, May 1.—(By Associated Press.)—All the ordinary activities of Russia stood still today while endless legions of workers, soldiers, communists and boys and girls, marching in long columns, carried on a parade.

Government offices, stores and factories were closed, the workers being given a three day holiday. Moscow was a riot of red and every public building flaunted flaming lithographs of Karl Marx, Lenin and other Bolshevik leaders.

A huge civilian parade followed the military demonstration. It took hours to pass the reviewing stand, and had decorated floats bearing the names of the premier of France and Ramsay MacDonald.

Another float had living figures representing those imprisoned by M. Tsankoff, the Bulgarian premier. There was also a float with hands covered with blood to represent Tsankoff.

ROSS REMOVAL IS CONTESTED

Arguments Opened in Circuit Court; Opposing Action of Governor

PORTLAND, May 1.—Arguments were continued here today in circuit court in quo warranto proceedings brought by Dr. Thos. Ross against John H. Veatch to determine by what authority the latter held appointment as a member of the state fish commission.

Arguments were based upon whether the governor had authority to remove Ross and appoint Veatch in his place. John H. Stevenson, attorney for Veatch, contended the governor had the right to remove and appoint a personal appointee by merely showing cause for such action, and that the court could not review the action of the governor.
