SPEC WOODS HAS BIG HARD PUNCH

Northwest Welterweight Title Holder Has Put Dubs Mulkey to Sleep

Any doubt as to the ability of Speck Woods, Spokane, northwest welterweight title holder, to deliver the goods when he meets Frankie Lewis, Salem, in the main event at the Armory Friday night, may be discarded. Woods, who is returning to the Oregon fight ring after an absence of nearly three years, packs some little punch and is a habitual seeker for an opportunity to deliver the same. Lewis realizes this and is working out nightly at the Armory in preparation for his meeting with Woods.

Just before leaving the state three years ago, Woods knocked out Dubs Mulkey, who is known to all Salem fight fans. Before the birds were summoned to sing their little song, Mulkey was floored nine times in the battle.

Because of the great amount of interest being taken in the coming fight, Matchmaker Plant has placed all seats in the front row of the balcony in the reserved list and tickets are available at Smith's Cigar store. Only one lady will be admitted free of charge with each of the reserved seat tickets.

Slow York, Eugene, will mix things for six rounds with Harold Reese, Portland, in the semi-wind-up. Two good preliminaries will round out the program.

The dope points to a victory for either the freshmen or the sophomores for neither of the other two classes have a complete team on the field unless a large number come in as last minute entries.
