This man we killed was in the good residence district, but I could not say just what part of Sacramento it was. We sold the automobile in Los Angeles and did not have a machine when we came back to Oregon." According to information furnished by C. S. Morrill, superin tendent of the California state bureau of criminal identification and investigation. Moor is known under several names and has serve', much time in penal institutions during the last 10 years. Among his aliases are R. C. White, C. R. White, Mac Moore and Clifford Rolland Moore. He was received at the Oregon penitentiary under the name of C. R. Moor. Records show that he has been confined in the Indiana reformatory, Folsom, San Quentin, Reno and Den-

In September, 1924, while being returned to Eugene from Clinton lowa, where he was arrested for the theft of an automobile, Moor attacked the deputy sheriff with a monkey wrench near Fort Morgan, fracturing the officer's skull

Warden Dalrymple has advised Sacramento authorities that Moor is under custody and can be turned over to them when desired. Mrs. Moore who had been staying in a local rooming house with a friend, Mrs. Rose Parker, returned to her home in Eugene last Saturday. Mrs. Parker was not in the office at the time the confession was made, but waited with the two children in the prison yard. She said she knew some paper had been signed, but was in ignorance of its nature.

Little Clara, age teven, met her mother's caller at the front door. "Come in and let me take your wraps, mother will be down in a minute," piped the child. The lady was seated and the little girl sat down too, but thinking of nothing to say she gazed out of the window.

Presently the lady said glancing at the child. She isn't very p-r-e-t-t-y, is she?"

"No" politely spoke Clara," but think?"
