

County News in Brief

Stayton

Recent visitors at the home of editor and Mrs. E. D. Alexander were: L. R. Eaton and wife of Salem and Mr. and Mrs. Perkins of Eugene.

G. E. Walters, a Salem business man, was in Stayton Friday looking after his business interests here.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Powell of Clackamas county were Sunday visitors at the home of his sister, Mrs. W. W. Crabtree. Their small son Billy, who has been a guest at the Crabtree home the past two weeks returned home with them.

Stayton had its second automobile accident within a week, on Wednesday evening when a car driven by Adam Kerber collided with one driven by the Pietrok Coy of Linn county. Slight damages were done both cars.

Joe Van Handel, a plasterer of this place broke both bones in his right arm Sunday afternoon, when he in company with several other young men from here were indulging in a little sport out near Kelly's mill on Mill creek. The group had been fishing and after-ward when the accident occurred afterward were practicing high jumping.

The grounds about the service station of Everett Downing bids fair to become one of the beauty spots of Stayton in the near future.

Mr. Downing is flanking the grounds on one side with choice Dahlias, having 48 varieties planted; on the other side Marigolds will lend a rich color, forming an attractive setting for the station, with its covering of green vines.

The pretty new bungalow of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Van Erman is nearing completion and when finished will be modern in every respect; and one of the neatest and most attractive dwellings in this city.

People gathered at the school grounds Saturday from far and near to witness the May Day festivities. Miss Esther Ridgeway was crowned "Queen of the May". The winding of the May poles by the high school girls, in bright colonial gowns was a very attractive feature of the day's festivities as was also the dance of the fairies by little Hazel Murphy, whose winsome grace won all hearts. The Minuet, by a group of the first grade pupils was very dainty and pretty. The field meet in the afternoon kept the crowd entertained until a late hour.

The comedy drama "Come Out of the Kitchen" given by the senior class on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of last week drew a record house both nights, several going both evenings to see the performance. The characters were all well taken and deserving of praise. Much of the success of the play lies to the credit of Miss Taylor who acted as director for the cast.

An all day session of the Grange attracted quite a crowd here on Saturday. The business meeting of the order was attended to in the morning, which was followed by a basket dinner. An open meeting to which the public was invited was held in the afternoon. The garage is quite an important factor in this end of the county, and some large projects are planned for future maturity. An entertaining program was given in connection with the business meeting Saturday. Delegations from four different grades were present.

Earl C. Downing, a local boy who has been a student in the Eugene Bible school during the winter, preached his first sermon from the pulpit in the Christian church here Sunday morning. Stayton friends of the young man are glad to note his rapid progress in his chosen profession and have faith in his future success.

held their regular meeting Friday evening, May 1, and after a short business session the following excellent program was enjoyed by all.

Three selections by the marliarity family orchestra of Hayesville. French songs by Lancy Bros. Trio.

Recitation by Eleanor Barth.

The Scotch solos by James Smart were extra fine and would be a credit to Harry Lauder at his best.

Dr. Brown of the federal child health demonstration emphasized the necessity of the proper care of the health and supervision of the forming of habits for health by the child.

The song by 6-year-old Bobby Ranges assisted on the piano by Mrs. Malcolm Ranges was a treat and Bobby had to respond to a number of encores.

Mrs. Clifton Mead gave a clever pianologue (Some Little Bug Will Get You.)

The monologues given by Miss Dagen were highly appreciated.

Vocal solos by Mrs. Fred Fargo.

Two selections by Moriarty family orchestra concluded the evenings entertainment.

Liberty

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Fox recently had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. B. Lauthum of San Francisco. Mr. Lauthum was a boyhood friend of Mr. Fox, both being reared in Topeka, Kansas. They had not met for 22 years.

Mrs. B. Neptune and Mrs. Huber C. Munding of Salem were callers in this neighborhood last Monday.

B. B. Robb, who has been working in his studio at Pendleton, is now at home but will return to his eastern Oregon work soon.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Hoag were dinner guests Tuesday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mapes and daughters Vera and Frances, of Salem, were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Browning Monday.

Mrs. H. A. Love is slowly recovering from her recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Hagan of Portland were visitors at the Rains home last Sunday.

E. L. Coffey is visiting relatives near Sweet Home.

Mrs. McNeer and Miss Gladys McNeer of Silverton visited at the W. H. Dorman home Sunday. Miss Ruth Goffred of Falls City was also their guest.

Claud Stevenson, who has been ill with a gripe, is now improving.

Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Judd were Rosedale visitors Sunday.

Miss Marion Holder of Portland is visiting at the home of her mother, Mrs. K. Holder.

Mrs. J. W. Anderson visited at Haskins over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Dancer, Veneta Rains and Dorothy Coffey were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Dancer of Salem Sunday.

R. X. Myers was called to Portland on account of sickness.

CHAPTER 451

THE SEEMINGLY SIMPLE ADVICE LILLIAN GAVE MADGE

I tried to conceal the shiver which Lillian's words sent over me. But the sinister possibilities for my father and the rest of us at which she had hinted were too much for me, and it was almost little girl, Betty, of Salem, visited at the W. H. Matheson home on Wednesday.

The Misses Tittle and Tilson, who are attending normal school at Monmouth, were visitors at the home of P. G. Judd Sunday.

Harlan Judd and Eugene Cruthers were Monmouth visitors Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance Clumber of Portland were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Coffey's Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Wolfe of Waldport visited Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Fox on their way home from a trip to Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Entwistle and son, Kenneth, and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Coffey visited at the Loveland home Sunday.

Lyle Rains and his friend, Mr. Ireland of Salem motored to Corvallis Sunday.

Mrs. A. B. Browning and her daughter Peggy returned Saturday from Seattle and Tacoma where they have been visiting relatives.

Mrs. Earl Cone was in Portland Sunday.

William McKenzie has left for Pendleton.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds and son, Kenneth, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Carlston and daughter, Louise, of Portland visited at the William Zosel home Sunday.

Livesley

Mrs. Alice Coolidge spent Friday night in Salem with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Pearson have gone to Astoria where they are temporarily employed.

J. Fitzwater, of Pennsylvania, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Stutesman.

Mrs. A. Fock and family have moved to St. Helena, Ore.

F. Borgst is recovering from influenza and is able to be about again.

Mrs. Julia Henningsen has rented part of her farm.

Miss Esther Long spent the week at her home in Woodburn.

Noble Henningsen and wife of Portland spent Easter Sunday with their mother, Mrs. Julia Henningsen.

Delmar Hansen had a birthday party Thursday evening.

Mrs. E. McAbee was in Salem Tuesday afternoon.

Betty and Margaret Mayes of Portland spent Easter Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Query.

half a minute before I was able to answer her.

"You mean—torture?" I whispered.

She nodded grimly.

"I mean just exactly that. No I'm not crazy, although ten years ago if I had hinted at anything so melodramatic you would have been justified in calling me so. But remember civilization has slipped back a thousand years in some respects in the last ten, and there is nothing too outrageous or fantastic to be impossible to a certain type of criminal mind—which isn't always confined to the ranks of the criminals," she finished, with a cynical little laugh.

"Don't look so white," she went on. "Remember, this isn't the probability, it's only the remote possibility. It's what will happen if they get hold of any of us, but they have to catch us before they cook us, and we're fully forewarned, very respectably forewarned—and I'm conceited enough to think that brain to brain, we outpoint them. The chances are 100 to 1 against their getting their hands on any one of us, but the one chance is what we must guard against. So take no risks, remember, after I am gone. I'll keep an eye on you while I'm here."

"I will do whatever you wish—you know that," I faltered.

"I know that." She put her hand on my shoulder with a comforting, comradely touch. "Have you seen Tom Chester yet?"

"A Case of Puppy Love."

The query was an abrupt one, and I guessed that she had put it more to divert my mind from the sinister picture she had been drawing than because she cared for an answer to it.

"No, I haven't," I replied. "I asked Father about him, and he said Mr. Chester had been very restless today. I thought it would be better to wait."

Lillian looked thoughtful.

"It's too late now, of course," she said. "But you'd better plan to go in to see him the first thing tomorrow morning. The poor lad's just sick enough to have worried a lot about you. Your father, with the early Victorian attitude which you invariably find in a former man of the world, appears to take the ground that nobody of the male persuasion save himself and Dicky has any right to express any concern over you. But I have a sneaking pity for the poor lad. He has as bad a case of puppy love as I ever saw in a youth of his years and discretion."

Madge is ill.

"While, of course, he'll never annoy you—his is the worship-of-a-star attitude," she went on, "yet you'll have to squelch him eventually. But just now he's sick and so upset and restless that his convalescence is being seriously delayed. He needs a glimpse of his divinity, and a few kind yet judicious words. So let me know when you're ready and I'll call on him with you."

"Whenever you think best," I found myself saying, mechanically, although my mental reaction to her astonishing was anything but stereotyped.

I had seen—being a woman with average perceptions—that young Tom Chester was more than ordinarily interested in me, but to have Lillian put it so badly into words, startled me. I had sense enough to perceive, however, that she regarded his emotions in much the same light as she would an attack of measles or chicken-pox for Marian. She would humor the child while she was ill and reserve all necessary discipline until she was well again.

"All right, I'll be in after breakfast," she said cheerily. "Now, get to bed. You need a good night's sleep about as badly as any one I know. Good night."

"Good night. I'll be all right in the morning," I called after her, but I boasted without result.

The next morning I could not lift my head from my pillow, because of an attack of my old enemy, neuralgic headache. Lillian and Katie cared for me assiduously all day, but it was an unusually severe attack, and I could scarcely bid my father good-bye when he left for Washington—I knew as the result of Lillian's talk with him, I was not myself again until the very day upon which Dicky was to arrive, and it was with the feeling of getting through with a duty expected of me, that I went with Lillian to my father's room, where Tom Chester was convalescing.
