Circus Leaves Town

A large crowd watched the Al G. Barnes circus leave Salem at a late hour last night. The big tents disappeared as if by magic and by the time the main performance was completed a large amount of the circus property was in the cars and ready to leave. Flares lit up the scene to facilitate the work of the bull gang and save a weird tone to the proceedings. The work went on as if run by a gigantic clock, every man seemed to be an animated being having just a certain task to perform and getting that done as soon as possible. Shortly the great tents were leveled to the ground, packed, and the circus was on its way to the next stop.

Hikers Going East

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Harvey, transcontinental hikers, arrived in Salem yesterday on their way to Washington, D. C., starting from Seattle on April 23. This is the second cross-country hike the Harveys have started. The first was from Kennett, Mo., where they traversed 3500 miles, crossing 11 states, and have secured practically the same number of signatures from governors they have visited. Mr. Harvey carries a pack which weighs 45 pounds, while Mrs. Harvey has one that tips the scales at 22 pounds. They carry this along with them and average about 15 miles per day by their hiking. They plan to finish the trip in about seven months.
